Great Wars Bring Changes
Some of the Sermons
Magic Words, Gold, Treasure
A New Racket

BY ARTHUR BRISBANE

AFTER A GREAT WAR important changes occur in government and "social systems."

One hundred and sixteen British bankers and manufacturers implore Great Britain to stick to and maintain trade and not to be stampeded into protection and retaliation.

Another group of bankers had urged "free trade within the empire, protection against outside competition."

DR. BUTLER OF Columbia University, worrying about Russian experiments in government, which shows that he is an intelligent conservative, says this country should show "tolerance for Russia's colossal experiment."

Russia will go ahead, whether we are tolerant or intolerant.

A new social concept is needed to meet the challenge and menace of Russia, says Dr. Butler; "humanity must now reconsider fundamental social justice."

If Russia has forced that conclusion on the world she has done a great deal.

To change our ideas of government sufficiently to meet the "soviet challenge" would require a complete change.

STALIN AND THOSE that govern Russia with him, seek to give everything possible to those that do the work.

Here, as everybody knows, the men in power give those that do the work as much as will keep them working. The real effort of those that govern is to increase their own gigantic fortunes and thus increase their power.

There is an element working against Russia's "colossal experiment" that Dr. Butler for the moment ignores, and that is human selfishness.

Revolutions begin by working for the masses, and end by accumulating wealth and power for themselves.

IT IS AN INTERESTING duty and worth while to read as many sermons as possible on Monday, having listened to at least one on Sunday.

In one Sunday's preaching these suggestions are offered:

To make profit your ideal is perilous.

Millions out of work prove that our social plan is a failure. The golden rule would remedy the trouble.

Labor should be happier. "The song has been taken from the workers' lips."

The worker is getting more money now than he ever did. Perhaps it is his automobile installment that takes the song from his lips.

THE "SPIRITUAL RACKETEER," with "only contempt for the Bible," worries one clergyman.

Another suggests that society be rebuilt on "plans and specifications of Jesus the Carpenter."

A clergyman from Australia, the Rev. Dr. Morris, says the "Life of the Spirit" would give us everything we need.

10,000 AT MARION'S LABOR CELEBRATION

COOPER, BELT ARE SPEAKERS

Governor; Federation Head Point to Amicable Relations Between Capital, Workers.

EVENT IS CITY'S BIGGEST

Columbus Groups and Marion Central Union Unite in Staging Program.

That the outstanding achievement of labor unions has been the development of a better understanding between labor and capital was the central theme of speakers on Marion's Labor day program at Crystal Lake park yesterday afternoon. Harmony now marks relations of the capitalist and laborer where friction formerly existed and the improvement has been argely the result of labor union activities, it was brought out in addresses by Gov. Myers Y. Cooper and Gilbert Belt, president of the Columbus Federation of Labor which cooperated with Marion in staging the largest local demonstration in history.

Appearance of Gov. Myers Y. Cooper and head of the Columbus Federation of Labor headlined the full program that drew 10,000 persons to Crystal Lake park yesterday and last night. The crowds included several hundred persons from the Columbus Federation, which omitted any formal demonstration in that city in favor of the local celebration.

Cooper Serenaded

Gov. Cooper was the center of interest from the time of his arrival at Hotel Harding at 1 p. m. until his departure three hours later. He was given a reception at Hotel Harding by city officials and civic groups, headed by Congressman Grant E. Mouser Jr. Gov. Cooper was serenaded in the lobby of the hotel by the Firemen's Band of Columbus.

From the hotel Gov. Cooper was escorted to Crystal Lake park where his appearance and address before several thousand persons was made.

Pointing out that Ohio has gradually changed from essentially an agricultural area to a state that ranks third in the production of the world's manufactured goods, Gov. Cooper gave credit to labor leaders for solving the dozens of political and economical problems that accompanied this change. Labor groups now stand in favor of both industry and the public where previously they were discouraged, he said.

"The path of progress between capital and labor lies in accord, not in discord," Gov. Cooper declared, pointing to the fact that most employers have not favored wage cuts during times of depression. To cut wages is considered by Gov. Cooper as one of the worst

DEATH MARKS CLOSE OF AVIATION TOURNEY

By International News Service

CHICAGO, Sept. 2—Aviation's aristocracy adjourned the 1930 national air races here today, sorrowed by the death of Captain Arthur H. Page, 35, United States marine corps ace whose plane crashed during the Thompson trophy race yesterday while traveling at a 205-mile-an-hour clip.

Participants in the speed classic which Captain Page was leading at the time of his crash agreed today that the marine corps flier died in a successful attempt to prevent his big Curtiss Hawk from plunging into the crowded grandstands.

Leading the rest of the field by almost an entire lap, Captain Page's engine sputtered and died as he was rounding the first pylon. He veered sharply off the course, avoiding the crowds, but his plane struck the ground before he could swing it completely around for a safe landing. Captain Page had an altitude of only 100 feet.

Polar Travelers of 1897 Passed Out in Sleep of Exhaustion, Is Belief.

By Wireless to the Associated Press

Aboard the Motor Ship Bratvaag, Skjaer Island, Norway, Sept. 2—Salomon August Andree, Swedish balloon explorer, and his two companions who in 1897 attempted to fly across the North Pole, died of exhaustion and slept themselves into death, it is believed by Dr. Gunnar Horn, head of the expedition which found their remains on White Island, east of Spitsbergen.

After a tortuous march and ride in frail boats across 180 miles of ice and icy water from the spot where their balloon came down, the explorers sustained life on White Island only a few months, Horn believes, killing birds and a bear for food. With the approach of winter 33 years ago they died one by one and at least two of their bodies froze into a sort of semi-permanency.

Those bodies remained in their natural graves of ice and snow until Aug. 6, when two harpooners of the Horn expedition, seeking drinking water on the bleak island, discovered a boat and boat hook

TROMSOE, Norway, Sept. 2—While the pious villagers of Tromsoe stood on the pier with bared heads, the black box containing the remains of Salomon Auguste Andree was carried ashore today by the crew of the whaler Bratvaag. Military heels clicked and rifles were held at salute as the box was carefully placed upon a hearse and taken to the city hospital. Scientists and embalming experts were waiting there to begin the task of preserving the explorer's remains.

BOY'S SKULL FRACTURED

Injury to Youth Most Serious Mishap in Marion Over Holiday.

Marion and vicinity escaped tragic accidents over the week-end and Labor day, although one small boy sustained a fractured skull and other injuries in an accident Saturday night. No deaths from automobile accidents were reported, although several persons were taken to City hospital for treatment of minor injuries.

Kenneth Lumpkins, 6-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Nollie Lumpkins suffered the most serious injuries in the holiday list of accidents. He sustained a fractured skull and a right leg broken two inches below the knee, according to Dr. A. A. Starner, his physician.

W. K. Orr of 620 Thompson street was driving on Lee street Saturday about 6:30 p. m. and had sounded the horn for two small children playing on the curb at his right. The Lumpkins boy is said to have ran out from the left side and into the machine. He was knocked down and ran over by the rear wheel of the Orr car.

Mr. Orr picked up the child and carried him into his home nearby. The child's condition was reported to be not serious this morning.

THREE SAVE LIVES IN LEAP FROM CAR

Auto Stalled on Big Four Tracks at Kenton Avenue Demolished by Engine.

A major tragedy at the Big Four Kenton avenue crossing was averted today at 1 p. m. by the quick thinking of Mrs. R. E. Griffin of 196 Short street when she and a woman companion and small child jumped from their machine stalled on the tracks in front of an onrushing Big Four express train.

The roadster was driven by Mrs. Griffin. The train caught the machine on the cow-catcher and carried it 500 feet down the tracks to pile it up a heap of wreckage. An interlocking plant, electrically controlling yard signals was torn from its cement base, interfering for the afternoon with electric signals in the yards. Trains were flagged by hand this afternoon.

Mrs. Griffin was going west when her roadster stalled on the tracks. A few seconds before the train hit the car she and the other two occupants jumped to safety.

BULLETIN

By The Associated Press

SMITHVILLE, N. Y., Sept. 2—The Pirter Gidbach, French entry in the Bennett balloon race, came down here shortly after noon today. The ship was piloted by Albert Boitard and Jean Herbe his aide. The balloonists left for Cleveland this afternoon by train.

By International News Service

CLEVELAND, O., Sept. 2—The ultimate destination of the pilots seeking the Gordon Bennett international balloon race trophy will probably be in the wild region of the St. Lawrence river valley or the wooded territory of Maine or New Brunswick, aeronautical experts here predicted today as race officials checked the progress of the contestants.

A possibility also exists that some of the bags may be swept dangerously close to the Atlantic ocean, forcing the pilots to be on the alert to land before they are carried out to sea, it was said.

Showers prevailed throughout the east and northeast—the territor over which most of the balloonists are now riding, C. G. Andrus, chief of the Cleveland airport weather bureau stated today. The wind velocity over this territory, Andrus said, is approximately 25 miles an hour up to a height of 4,000 feet above that there is a westerly wind blowing at about 35 miles an hour.

Weather Hazardous

The weather conditions as a whole for the race, Andrus said, were probably more hazardous than any of the competing pilots ever encountered before in their flights for fame and fortune.

Meantime, Bennett race officials here combed the skies of the eastern section of the country to trace and locate the whereabouts of the competing balloonists.

The "City of Detroit," piloted by E. J. Hill, with A. C. Schlosser as aide, was reported seen over Auburn, N. Y., at 7 a. m., according to word reaching race officials here. The location of the craft indicated that it was riding the same wind as the Goodyear VIII.

Another report received at race headquarters here from Earlville, N. Y., said that the Belgium entry, "Belgica," piloted by the famous Captain Ernest Demuyter, passed over that town at 6:30 a. m., heading eastward.

The American entry, Goodyear VIII, which is piloted by America's premier balloonist and holder of the 1929 Bennett trophy, Ward T. Van Orman, was reported seen over Syracuse, N. Y., today at 7 a. m. The message received by race officials here stated that the Goodyear craft appeared to be making good progress. It passed over Cortland, N. Y., a short time later. The balloon was flying at about 2,000 feet, the report said.

An unverified report was received by race officials this morning that a Buffalo air mail pilot, flying the night route from Buffalo to Cleveland, narrowly avoided crashing into one of the contending balloons over Dunkirk, N. Y. The pilot said that a severe storm was raging at the time and that he was unable to identify the craft.

The balloon race started from Cleveland airport in view of nearly 200,000 spectators a few minutes after 5 p. m. yesterday. The craft, "City of Detroit," led the way.

All of the balloons baskets were filled with ballast and supplies. Three of the bags carried small collapsible boats as a precaution against mishap over stretches of water. Other equipment included a barograph, barometer, variometer, compass and radio receiving set.

Star Gets Enlarged Wire News Service

THE world-wide telegraph news reports of United Press are today introduced to readers of The Star, supplementing the dispatches of Associated Press. The International News Service will also be continued to aid in giving readers of The Star the most complete possible coverage of events throughout the world.

These are the three great American news collecting and distributing agencies which serve, usually individually, all of the country's newspapers. Seldom is it possible for one newspaper to participate in the advantages of all three.

The Star, together with other Brush-Moore newspapers in Ohio, gives its readers this wide range of news selection through the introduction of a special wire. In addition, this will permit expansion of news coverage in the state of Ohio through the linking of The Portsmouth Times, The Marion Star, The Steubenville Herald-Star, the Salem News, The East Liverpool Review and The Canton Repository on this exclusive Brush-Moore leased wire.

In turn, the Brush-Moore newspapers are serving as a news collection group for The Associated Press with a bureau in The Canton Repository to which the above newspapers will contribute news of their respective cities, to be relayed thence to all other Associated Press newspapers.

HEARST OBEYS FRENCH ORDER

U. S. Publisher Leaves Paris Within Hour After Hearing Expulsion Edict.

By United Press

PARIS, Sept. 2—William Randolph Hearst, American publisher, left Paris for London yesterday afternoon within an hour after an expulsion order had been served against him by an agent of the police.

Hearst's expulsion was confirmed by the Quai D'Orsay, the French foreign office.

Distinct reasons for the expulsion order were given as the generally hostile attitude of the Hearst newspapers toward France.

The prefecture stated that the order had been prepared for a long time, but that officials had not been able to serve it until yesterday.

Harold J. T. Horan, a Paris correspondent for the Universal service, one of the Hearst news organizations, last October was expelled from France for his part in securing for publication in America in the Hearst papers and other members of the Universal Service association, documents connected with the secret Anglo-French naval pact.

Horan was charged with having obtained the documents from the French foreign office in a manner considered unethical. The Anglo-American Press association expelled him from its membership in connection with the affair.

At the time the French press assailed Mr. Hearst as responsible for the Naval accord leak. The so-called secret accord provided for a cruiser arrangement between Diamond, it was expected, will be taken to the frontier and expelled.

Gain Landfall on Nova Scotian Coast Early Today; Plane Shows Speed.

BULLETIN

By The Associated Press

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 2—Coast guard headquarters here reported that the station at Great Wass Island on the Maine coast at 1:55 p. m., (Maine time) had sighted an airplane believed to be the Question Mark, Coste and Bellonte plane. The coast guards on the island said the plane was flying west. Great Wass Island is off Bar Harbor.

By United Press

NEW YORK, Sept. 2—Dieudonne Coste and Maurice Bellonte today became the first aviators to have flown westward from the mainland of Europe to the mainland of North America without stop.

When at 9:30 (Marion time) they gained a landfall near Cape Canso, Nova Scotia and came flying down the Nova Scotian coast they had accomplished the thing which so many, beginning with Nungesser and Coli and reaching down through a long, tragic list, had attempted without result.

At noon they were believed to be in the vicinity of Halifax and, barring difficulties, should reach New York after dark tonight.

Travel at High Speed

They had left Le Bourget field just outside Paris, France, at 4:55 a. m. yesterday and since then had flown at remarkable speed for their heavily laden biplane, sometimes making well more than 100 miles an hour.

Several hours before the trans-Atlantic plane was due at Curtiss Field today heavy darkness, presaging a rainstorm, descended over the metropolitan area.

Dr. James A. Kimball of the weather bureau said the condition was general all along the coast down which Captain Dieudonne Coste and B. Bellconte were flying but believed the fliers should beat the storm if the landed before nightfall.

When word that they had attained the mainland of North America reached New York the city already had in motion the machinery for a welcome to them. It was expected a record crowd would greet them when they arrived—as everyone believed they would—at the Curtiss Wright flying field, Valley Stream, L. I., tonight.

Even should the aviators be forced down they would have to their credit a flight without parallel among the many attempted from east to west across the Atlantic. Only Charles Kingsford Smith and his companions have approached their record and their flight had its beginning at Dublin and not on the European mainland.

Make Fast Time

Leaving LeBourget yesterday morning Coste and Bellonte headed straight over France, crossed southern England and in five hours and five minutes after their take-off passed out over the Atlantic at Loop Head, Ireland, their last landfall in European waters.

For the next five hours they averaged approximately 100 miles an hour and by 3 p. m. were about 580 miles off the Irish coast, the liner Isle De France reporting them.

The flight through the night was as steady in its progress as it had been during the daylight hours after leaving France.

Three a. m., they were reported 400 miles off the coast of New Foundland. The early dawn was just reaching them, apparently, when what seems to have been the first difficulty of the trip was encountered in the form of usual fogs lingering off New Foundland and the Grand Banks. So they turned their course southward in the hope of avoiding the fog bank and thus skirted below New Foundland and were reported at 8 a. m. off Miquelon, the little French island off the southern New Foundland coast.

Dodge Fogs Course

More fog lay between Miquelon and the coast of Nova Scotia and apparently they again turned slightly southward. At 8:30 a. m., the Clipper Typebrige reported sighting them a little to the westward of Sable Island, perhaps 100 miles off the coast of Nova Scotia.

"Anybody's Woman," with Ruth Chatterton in Leading Role, Is Special Offering at Palace; "The Sea Bird" Presents Scenes in Depths of Ocean.

BY HALLIE HOUCK

AGAIN that perfect combination, Ruth Chatterton and Clive Brook, appear in a new, sophisticated play, "Anybody's Woman," coming to the Palace Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday.

Dorothy Arzner, Hollywood's most talented woman director, who was responsible for Chatterton's "Sarah and Son," who directed "Manhattan Cocktail," "Get Your Man," and "The Wild Party," directed the latest picture for the former Broadway star.

Miss Chatterton has starred in some of the best pictures of the last year, including "Madame X," "Charming Sinners," "The Laughing Lady," and "Sarah and Son."

Ruth Chatterton

This story, in which Paul Lukas, Huntly Gordon, Virginia Hammond, Tom Patricola and Juliette Compton have important roles, is the story of a woman who battles to hold the husband who married her in hate and bitterness.

Some one recently compiled a list of Miss Chatterson's likes and dislikes that let you really know the star. Ruth Chatterton is inclined to be formal in public, according to the list and she intensely dislikes anything flashy. Disliking colors, she dresses either in black or white and when she entertains at her Malibu Beach home, which she does extensively, her guests are requested to do exactly as they please while visiting her.

HERE'S another good team, Richard Arlen and Fay Wray, in "The Sea God," at the Palace Friday and Saturday. Dick is Phillip "Pink" Barker, the Sea God, and Miss Wray is "Daisy," a stowaway on an adventure ship. Eugene Pallette, Robert Gleckler, Ivan Simpson, Bob Perry, Maurice Black and Fred Wallace are also in the cast, with Pallette in a prominent part.

The dialog and sound were caught by the first camera-microphone ever devised to probe the depths of the sea without the protection of a diving bell. Action scenes filmed on an ocean floor through the crystal-clear waters of the Pacific, should attract a great deal of attention.

During the filming of this picture Arlen found a reducing process that he guarantees. It took five pounds from his weight in one day.

The method is simple. It consists of working on land in hot weather, attired in a deep-sea diving suit. Arlen lost five pounds in line of duty. He was forced to fight his way through heavy jungle brush for several scenes while wearing the heavy diving equipment. He previously had worn the outfit inaction filmed on the floor of the Pacific ocean.

RECENT RAINS AID FARMERS

Pastures and Late Hay Crops Benefited, Reports Ohio Bureau.

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 2—Ohio wheat acreage this fall may not be greatly reduced if weather conditions permit, according to a bulletin issued here today by the Ohio Farm Bureau Corporation.

The bulletin says the recent rains have encourage farmers. There has not been any great change in the outlook for crop yields, according to the bulletin, but pastures and late hay crops have been much benefited by the recent rains

Pastures, the bulletin states, are becoming greener, and lawns and shrubbery are showing the beneficial effects of the rains and have probably increased the yield of soy bean hay. Many corn fields are continuing green as a result of the rains, but it is doubtful whether the yield of corn will be increased to any great extent.

The brightening effect of the rains, according to the bulletin, is a distinct advantage in improving the attitude of the country and will give the farmers more interest in the autumn seeding. If pastures continue to revive, the dairy industry will be greatly benefited and many thousands of dollars may be saved Ohio farmers in the purchase of hay and feed.

Fall Planting Prospects

The acreage to be seeded to wheat this fall will be almost normal in the wheat sections of the state, provided weather conditions permit. It will be useless to seed wheat until the ground is thoroughly soaked with rain and if Ohio has only scattered showers during the coming three weeks the area seeded in Ohio may be greatly reduced. If weather conditions are favorable the acreage should not be far below normal, the bulletin says.

The rye acreage will undoubtedly be increased this fall. Some farmers, the bulletin points out, are using rye as a soiling crop to plow under for next spring for corn. Smaller fertilizer requirements for rye make another reason for the increase in rye seeding.

Livestock prices have improved very decidely and this favorable change is encouraging to farmers, the bulletin states. This increase in livestock prices has come at a strategic time to influence farmers to retain breeding livestock in order to provide for next season, according to the bulletin.

Livestock Situation Favorable

The statistical position of the hog market, the bulletin says, is sound at this time.

Aside from a possible attempt to unload hogs after a short feeding on new corn, there is every reason for feeling that hog prices will be favorable. A real shortage in hogs might easily develop next summer, the bulletin points out.

In continuing, the bulletin says that an improvement in pasture conditions with indications of fair feed prices should check any unnecessary efforts to dispose of dairy cows. Increases in milk prices have already changed sentiment to a considerable extent toward dairying.

Financial conditions in the country, the bulletin states, should be asisted by the recent efforts to organize an intermediate credit association in Ohio.

Ohio's farmers, the bulletin points out, have been in need of this facility, but it seemed to require an emergency like the present to get this work under way.

SCHOOL GIRL, 13, GAINS 21 POUNDS; KONJOLA DID IT

Mother Pays Grateful Tribute To New Medicine; "Wish Other Mothers To Know," She Says

MISS EMMA MILLION

"Konjola is indeed a medicine for all the family," said Mrs. Mary Reed, 214 Wade street, Cincinnati, mother of Miss Emma Million. "My daughter, Emma, was weak and did not play like other children. She was billious, her eyes were dull, and she suffered intensely from constipation. Her kidneys were weak and her liver sluggish. She was often taken ill at school and lost much time from her studies.

"Emma gained 21 pounds since I began giving her Konjola. It has been eighteen months since I gave her this medicine and she is in perfect health today. She began to improve rapidly with the treatment. Constipation disappeared, she was no longer billous, and she began to romp and play as a healthy child should. The weak fainting spells soon passed and her eyes began to sparkle with health. Konjola will always have a place in my home."

The wonderful works of Konjola are not restricted to any age. It may be taken by young or old with amazing results. A trial of from six to eight weeks is recommended for the best results.

Konjola is sold in Marion, O. at Stump and Sams Pharmacy and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.—Adv.

BUCYRUS MAN DIES AFTER AUTO CRASH

Jacob Korb Dies from Injuries in Collision of Two Cars.

family from Marion to Ft. Wayne, Ind., yesterday was suddenly terminated a short distance from Meeker when a Michigan autoist forced the Brineman car into the ditch, injuring both Mrs. Brineman and a son Donald. Mr. and Mrs. Brineman and two sons have been guests for some time at the home of Mrs. Brineman's cousin, Mrs. Walter Guthrie of Mt. Vernon avenue.

It is believed that the Michigan autoist whose identity could not be learned today passed the Brineman car and then cut sharply in front of it causing the latter to crash into a ditch. Mrs. Brineman and a young son who was sitting on her lap at the time of the accident were thrown clear of the wreck and the son was not injured. Mrs. Brineman's shoulder was broken.

Another son, Donald, who was riding in the rear seat at the time of the accident suffered facial cuts and numerous bruises about the body. Passing motorises brought the Brineman family to the Guthrie home.

It is reported that several occupants of the other car were injured in the mishap.

Suffers Broken Leg

F. W. Huggins of 122½ North Main street suffered a broken left leg when he was knocked down by a sedan driven by Glenn Ackerman of Bellefontaine avenue Saturday at 11 p. m. on North Main street. According to Ackerman this morning the man walked from between two machines directly in front of his car. Mr. Huggins' leg was broken in three place: below the knee and he also was cut about the head in several places. He was taken to City hospital in the W. C. Boyd ambulance and was taken to the offices of Dr. F. V. Murphy for an X-ray examination and returned to the hospital in the invalid car Sunday morning.

Eugene Davis, 8-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Davis of 674 Davids street, ran into a car driven by William Kenyon Jr. of Blaine avenue Saturday about 8 p. m. while he was returning from a grocery store to his home. A report of the accident stated that the boy was on roller skates and was being chased by several other children. His right leg was broken. Kenyon picked him up and carried him into the Davis home. The boy was taken to the Frederick C. Smith clinic in the W. C. Boyd invalid car and Sunday afternoon was removed to his home.

Car Hits Ditch

J. J. Ripley of East Cleveland and Harold Neilson of Cleveland, were in City hospital Saturday night following an accident near Upper Sandusky. The coach in which they were riding skidded into a ditch seven miles west of Upper Sandusky early Saturday night. Ripley sustained a fractured right ankle and Neilson's hand was injured. Neilson left the hospital Sunday and Ripley was released Monday.

A small coupe in which Mr. and Mrs. Layton Deutsch of Detroit were riding, with Mrs. Deutsch at the wheel, turned over three times Saturday night about 14 miles north of here. Mr. Deutsch sustained a wound on his left leg and a lacerated right thigh and hand. Mrs. Deutsch was not injured. The car was badly damaged.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas O. Showers and son Tommy of 328 South State street narrowly escaped serious injury early Sunday when their car skidded into a tree and overturned near Detroit, Mich. The Showers family was returning from Beverly, Mass., where they had been visiting a brother-in-law who is seriously ill. None was seriously injured.

Five Escape In Mishap

Five persons, four of them from Marion, narrowly escaped serious injury when the car in which they were riding skidded over the abutment of a bridge five miles north of Marysville Sunday morning. Minor cuts and bruises were sustained by several occupants of the car, which skidded when the driver M. C. Fox of 763 Merkel avenue, attempted to stop to give aid to persons in another wreck.

In the car with Fox were his two sons, Finley and Richard. Finley sustained cuts about the face. George Burroughs of East Center street was bruised and Miss Ruth Crocker of Middletown sustained cuts about the face.

Occupants of the overturned car seen by Fox were not injured. Their names were not learned.

Fox's Pontiac sedan was demolished. It was taken to the Haberman Chevrolet Co. here.

"NO COMPLAINT TO MAKE"

Hearst Says French Made Him Feel "Quite Important."

LONDON, Sept. 2—William Randolph Hearst issued the following statement here today:

"I have no complaint to make. The officials were extremely polite. They said I was an enemy of France and a danger in their midst. They made me feel quite important.

"They said I could stay in France a little while longer if I desired, that they would take a chance on nothing disastrous happening to the republic.

"But I told them that I did not want to take the responsibility of endangering the great French nation; that America had saved it once during the war, and I would save it again by leaving.

"Furthermore, I was like the man who was told that he was going blind, and who said he did not mind, as he had seen everything anyhow.

"Similarly, I had seen everything in France, including some very interesting governmental performances.

"Then I asked Mr. Tardieu's emissary to express to Mr. Tardieu my immense admiration at his amazing alertness in protecting France from the peril of invasion, and we departed with quite elaborate politeness.

"It was a little foolish, but extremely French."

Explains Cause

"The reason for the strained relations—to use a proper diplomatic term—was the publication of the secret Anglo-French treaty two years ago by the Hearst newspapers, which upset some international 'applecarts,' but informed the American people; and of course that being the reason, the French government was entirely right in leveling its attack at me, and quite wrong in its action towards Mr. Horan, who was only my agent.

"I think, however, that the general attitude of the Hearst press in opposing the entrance of the United States into the League of Nations, or any protective pacts to involve our country in the quarrels of European powers, is mainly responsible.

"Also, there might have been some slight irritation at the occasional intimations in our papers that France, now being the richest nation in the world, might use some of the German indemnity to pay her honest debts to America, especially because if it had not been for America she would now be paying indemnity instead of receiving it.

"If being a competent journalist and a loyal American makes a man persona non grata in France, I think I can endure the situation without loss of sleep.

"In fact, the whole affair reminds me of the story of the rather effeminate young man who went to call on his best girl and found her in the arms of another young fellow."

Lucky is the bride who marries the best man at her wedding.

which once belonged to the Andree expedition. They began an investigation which ended in discovery of the headless clothed skeleton of Andree, the clothed skeleton of one of his companions, and of a group of bones which may be those of the third member of the party.

Body in Sitting Position

Andree's body, sitting, with a foot encased in ice and a rifle and oil stove by its side, was found near the base of a mountain. A skull nearby evidently was Andree's. The body had greatly deteriorated and was not much more than a skeleton clothed in Arctic apparel, in the pocket of which was found a monogram by which it was identified. The teeth of the other skeleton, found nearby, partly covered with stones, may solve whether it is Nils Strindberg or Knut Frankel, the other members of the party.

Dramatically the little sealer Bratvaag sailed into Hasvick Sunday, after a search by Swedish official vessels and news expeditions which covered a wide area of the north seas. Dr. Horn there notified the authorities officially of his discovery, news of which had already reached the world through the captain of the sealer Terningen.

The Bratvaag, Dr. Horn said, left Tromsoe July 30, intending to visit Franz Joseph Land (now Fridtjof Nansen Land) where the scientific expedition could make observations while the sealer's crew hunted walrus, seals, whales and ice bears. White Island was sighted Aug. 5, 12 miles west of its mapped position, and the next day the expedition put in there, able for once to do so because of the quiet sea.

Island Wild and Barren

"We landed and were soon on our way inland across the naked island," Dr. Horn said. "On it were mountains of granite and gneiss. Between them stretches of gravel and sand. Only a shallow little lake broke the tediousness of the landscape. Brown moss shaded a little spot of color here and there. Otherwise vegetation was very sparse."

August 6, two of the crew of the vessel were searching for drinking water when they noticed a clump of snow somewhat blacker than others around and upon investigation found it to contain ruins of an old boat. A boat-hook, protruding, bore the name "Andree Polar Expedition, 1897."

The two harpooners ran back to the others and notified them of their discovery. Skipper Eliassen came and against the side of a mountain found the body of a man with its feet half buried in snow. Eliassen realized the import of the discovery and hurried back to the Bratvaag for Dr. Horn, who followed him back to the island.

Dr. Horn, returning with Captain Eliassen, found not only Andree's body, identified by a monogram on his Arctic suit, but a sledge, a piece of red and black cloth which may have served for a tent, and other of the paraphernalia of the camp. Andrees body was fully clothed except for shoes, which were worn almost through.

Beside Andree's body lay a gun and an oil stove. Oil in the stove could be pumped out in a fine spray, the apparatus being in good order. In Andree's pocket were a diary, a pencil, and a pedometer. Between two mounds of earth and partly covered with stone, not far away, the body of another member of the expedition was found. The body apparently had been laid there by the others. It was "frozen down" and hard to get out. In the old boat were found some bones, but Dr. Horn was unable to decide whether they were human bodies.

Mark Place of Discovery

The bodies and remains of the expedition were packed into the Bratvaag's boats and taken back to the sealer where a depository was constructed on the after deck. Before leaving the site Dr. Horn and his companions constructed a cairn over the spot where they made the discovery. In the cairn they placed a note in Norwegian and English explaining what they had found there.

Dr. Horn believed the balloon expedition, which left Dane's island in July 1897, met failure when ice and snow weighted the balloon down and sent it to the ice at latitude north 83, about 180 miles north of White island. The men set out for the nearest land, and probably after many days reached the island, as bleak and desolate a place as there is on the face of the map.

They set about to eke a subsistence from the island, but worn out with their long trip across the ice, they failed, dying, their bodies were covered by snow and ice. Others probably have walked over the spot and not recognized its significance. But this year the ice melted down unusually quickly and to a greater extent than in years past. Dr. Horn believes it possible many other relics of the expedition are still covered with snow and ice.

The log, or observation book of the expedition, rather than Andree's diary, Dr. Horn indicated, must be looked to for the real story of the expedition. The diary's pages are stuck together and there is some doubt that it is readable at all. The log, Dr. Horn said, is most comprehensive and far from the mathematical journal it might have been.

CHICAGO has a new racket. Three hundred toy golf courses are informed that they "must come across" or be made unsafe for ambitious golfers.

That was tried in New York, but Police Commissioner Mulrooney found a way to discourage the idea.

Civic bodies in Chicago united "to put a stop to the Capone-Baker racketeer control, which takes $300,000 a week out of Chicago business men." That is only one small item in Chicago's crime budget, and it amounts to $15,600,000 a year. The wonder is what the racketeers do with all their money.

BANK HEAD MAY NOT FACE PRESENT JURY

Attorney Expects To Delay Case Until October; "Too Important To Hurry."

By International News Service

CLEVELAND, Sept. 2—The case of James A. Casey, former president of the Citizens' National bank of Galion, O., who is awaiting hearing before the federal grand jury on charges of embezzlement of funds and falsification of records of the bank, may not be aired before the September jury, which was to start its sessions here this afternoon.

The possibility that the case would be delayed until the October grand jury sessions, was indicated here today by Assistant District Attorney William McDermott, who is handling the prosecution of the case for the United States government.

The investigation of the Galion bank situation by the department of justice has not yet been completed, according to McDermott. It will not be known definitely whether the government will proceed with the evidence until tomorrow or Thursday, he said.

McDermott described the case as being "too important" for any hasty action, and intimated that it was "very probable" that the case would not be heard until October.

Mansfield Man To Face Charge of Carrying Concealed Weapons.

Blue was captured by Sergeant E. O. DeWees after the colored an had pulled a gun on the officer. Blue leaped from a moving passenger train at the Erie yards and drew his weapon when DeWees ordered him to halt. He surrendered when DeWees threatened to shoot.

Blue was bound over to the grand jury under $1,000 bond when he pleaded guilty in municipal court to the charge of possessing concealed weapons.

steps possible in the time of business depression.

Gov. Cooper struck an optimistic note on present conditions. In a recent conference with President Hoover, the President expressed the opinion that present conditions would be on the road to normal were it not for the excessive drouth. In the opinion of both, improved conditions are already here and still better times are in the near future.

Unveils Monument

Immediately following his appearance here, Gov. Cooper left for Alexandria where he participated in the unveiling of a monument as part of that city's celebration of the anniversary of its founding.

Men and organizations who a few years ago fought higher wages and shorter hours are now commenting favorably on the aims and ideals of organized labor, Gilbert Bolt, president of the Columbus Federation said in a short talk immediately preceding Gov. Cooper's appearance. After showing how labor groups and industry are rapidly becoming reconciled with resulting advantages to both, Bolt, a former Marion man, clearly defined labor's viewpoints.

"Strikes are undesirable and are encouraged only as a last resort," Bolt said. "Strikes, like wars, are at times necessary if self respect is to be maintained," he declared.

"Though few workers receive the full product of their labor, they are receiving a larger share today than ever before, due to the organized labor movement," Bolt added.

"Communism and other similar organizations find little to thrive on where workers are steadily employed at good wages and under humanitarian conditions," Bolt added.

Defines Movement

In defining the trade union movement, Bolt said it "fosters education and uproots ignorance, raises wages and lowers usury, increases independence, develops manhood, discourages selfishness and establishes fraternity, induces liberality and reduces prejudice, creates rights and abolishes wrong, lightens toil, makes the workers' workshops safe and brighter, cheers the home and makes the world better and insures against revolution."

Bolt pointed to Gov. Cooper as a man friendly to labor groups. He also endorsed Robert J. Bulkley, Democratic candidate for United States senator from Ohio.

Dale W. Stump, superintendent of claims for workmen's compensation in the state department of industrial relations, and president of the state employes association, presided at the program and introduced both Bolt and Gov. Cooper. He was introduced by Ralph K. Ruppart, secretary of the Marion Central Labor Union which sponsored the program. Stump also pointed to the amicable relations of capital and the working man.

Official welcome was given speakers and the Columbus delegation by Mayor L. Don Jones preceding the principal addresses of the program. An unofficial welcome was given the Columbus group at city hall when a special C., D. & M. interurban car arrived with the delegation.

Members of the Columbus Firemen's Band, under direction of Chief O. L. Rodgers, were banqueted at Hotel Marion at noon. After serenading Gov. Cooper at 1 p. m., the band went to Crystal Lake park to appear on the program. Music was also furnished by the Marion Municipal band, in charge of N. M. Parshall, conductor.

Community singing was led from the platform by Asa Queen.

Several persons were given lodging in city prison when they were arrested by police in an allegedly intoxicated condition. Nearly a dozen of them drew $10 fines in municipal court this morning when they pleaded guilty to intoxication charges.

Where Politics Is Zestful.

Augusto B. Leguia, who for some twenty-seven years has been sitting on the top of a powder magazine in Peru, is in danger of losing his life. He is experiencing the usual fate of those gallant gentlemen who have the courage to play politics where it is zestful—in the Latin-American countries.

Senor Leguia's resignation as president of Peru was forced by the military junta which overthrew his government. The country now is in control of a new military government headed by Lieutenant Colonel Luis M. Sanchez Cerro, who initiated the revolutionary movement. To strengthen its hold on popular fancy, presumably, the temporary government is holding the former president for trial on charges of alleged misdeeds during his reign as dictator. Senor Leguia, in other words, is the victim of a Latin mob, albeit not a violent one.

Back of it is a great deal of history and the uncomfortable way of Latins of rewarding government officials. In 1903 Senor Leguia entered politics, accepting the position of finance minister. Immediately, he opened a fight with the rich old families of the country, depriving them of tax exemption and monopolies. By doing so he sowed the seeds which now have grown into a revolution that endangers his life. Senor Leguia's success as a government official marked him as a presidential possibility, but in Peru presidents are not elected for their abilities. The wealthy families say who shall and who shall not be. Senor Leguia, therefore, found it necessary to do something new. He appealed to the Indians with a proposition to create a middle class among them, and it worked. But his subsequent position as president was assailed in every possible way by his wealthy enemies, and only a phenomenal determination to stick enabled him to finish his term in 1912. Attempts on his life forced him to flee the country and he did not return until 1919. It was politics again then, and after a bloodless coup he was elected president by the Peruvian congress. Once more possessed of power, which he was to keep for eleven years, he reopened his project to make middle-class Indians an effective part of the productive scheme and was successful. Under his leadership, cotton and sugar production was increased five-fold, the national debt per capita was made smaller than that of any country in the world, and Peru became financially the most independent country in South America. But while developing his country's resources and working for the emancipation of the 3,000,000 Indians, Senor Leguia lost sight of some 600,000 members of the upper classes and the old families—his lifelong enemies. They struck—and Senor Leguia now faces death for his trouble.

Such is the way of the world in Peru, where politics are zestful and where the politician has to flirt with something more grim than defeat at the polls.

The Great Divide.

The Blue and Gray will never meet this side of "The Great Divide."

The decree was made at the sixty-fourth encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic in Cincinnati. The encampment ended Thursday, following election of officers for the coming year.

Since the close of the Civil war there have been those who have sought a formal reunion of veterans of the Union and Confederate armies. Always there has been something to prevent it: first, the continuance of ill feeling between the two groups; more recently, a technicality concerning the appearance of the "Stars and Bars" in the official reunion parade. Naturally the Confederate veterans were unwilling to be seen without the flag for which they fought; just as naturally the Union veterans were unwilling to march with the flag which they had defeated.

The matter should be allowed to rest where the commander-in-chief of the Grand army has placed it. "There will be no reunion of the Blue and the Gray this side of 'the great divide.'" That seems to be the will of the veterans. But it will not be allowed to rest there. Always there will become one so eager to weep over the symbolic union of the Blue and the Gray that he will neglect the feelings of these fine old men who can't forget they once fought and died for a principle.

Labor Day in Marion.

Labor day was notably celebrated in Marion, Monday. It very probably was the most successful demonstration of the kind in local history. The program of the day's events was as varied as its features were interesting, and the presence of Governor Myers Y. Cooper, in itself, made the celebration notable beyond the ordinary.

The chief addresses of the day were made by the governor and Gilbert Belt, president of the Columbus Federation of Labor, who was accompanied here by a large delegation. It may be said, in passing, that the day's events attracted representatives of the labor world from neighboring cities as well as many not enrolled in the ranks of organized labor, all of whom were splendidly entertained.

It is needless to go into the addresses of the two principal speakers, as they are given in outline in our news columns, but we would be remiss did we not pay tribute to their excellence, that of Governor Cooper being especially able and convincing.

All in all, the day's celebration was a great success from beginning to end without the slightest incident to detract from its enjoyment.

Helen Wills Moody insists that she be referred to, save on score cards, as Mrs. Frederick Moody. That will save her husband from being known as Mr. Helen Wills.

A Fable of Two Brothers.

A matter of ten years ago a baby was born. No one desiring to take the responsibility, he was left on the world's doorstep to await the day when some one would pick him up.

That day was long in coming. No one had ever seen anything just like him before and no one wants to gamble on an unknown baby when the known ones are so much trouble. Furthermore, this infant was different. The only regular thing about him was the absence of clothing. He made queer raucous sounds which seemed to exert a strange spell over the listeners, causing them to twitch, and sway their bodies in rhythmic movements. He was, therefore, exposed to the world's skepticism and criticism. But, that only made his resistance stronger; he thrived on adversity.

One day some one noticed him and took a chance. They dressed him up in white paper and put little black marks on it by way of decoration. They called him Jazz and gave him his new guardian's last name, Music, after much deliberation.

The family name was all the foundling needed. Once adopted, every one wanted to play with him. He was most popular among young persons. Eventually, however, his good nature, his contagious good humor and that ability to make every one in the vicinity feel better penetrated the conservative hearts of the elders.

Every one was happy, except one, an elder brother in the Music family, whose name was Classical. He was the favorite son and rightful heir. But now, his Grecian nose was out of joint. So he cast slurring remarks about his foster brother and wept and wailed without end. The parents were patient; they didn't want friction and they liked both the boys.

The situation is still an uncomfortable one. Jazz was farsighted enough to see that his public would be fickle and he curried its favor by changing his costume as occasion demanded. Classical, until recently, in the United States, adhered to a doublet and a sad face and his presence was frequently made too impressive to please the crowd. People wanted to have him around more often, but they didn't care for the formal costume and the holier-than-thou attitude.

The public is anxious that the two get together. Jazz needs a bit of toning down; Classical needs a bit of touching up. Most persons have a fondness for both, but they refuse to conform to certain foolish conceptions which have arisen concerning proper conduct in their presence.

Representative Burton L. French, of Idaho, urges the abolition of battleships. Mr. French no doubt feels the freer to do so owing to the fact that alien battleships are not equipped with stilts and that Idaho, for obvious reasons, would be about the last state a foreign foe would consider worthy of its attention, anyway.

Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler says the "red challenge must be met." Well, that's a decided change. For a number of years the good doctor has been crying out that the country is doomed in the event of our failure to meet the challenge of the blue-ribboners.

A Mastadon Find.

BY J. H. GALBRAITH.

The present area of Ohio was in the very center of the region inhabited by the great prehistoric elephants—a fact which is proved by the finding of the bones of mastadons wherever conditions were favorable for the entrapment of the enormous animals.

Of course many of them died from various causes so that their bodies must have lain on the surface where they fell, but under the effect of the elements their skeletal parts followed the flesh portions into complete decay and not a vestige of them was saved to the day when the civilized men came to this region.

But where the ground was swampy the heavy animals pushing their way into swamps in search of food, mired down deep into the marsh, and were unable to extricate themselves. They died there, and their bodies, sinking beneath the surface, surrounded by soil that contained more or less preservative material, such as peat, were preserved, and were often brought to light by excavation in such soil made dry by drainage operations of civilization.

One of the earliest of these discoveries was made by Abraham Hahn on August 13, 1838, while he was digging a raceway for his mill in Crawford county. The place was near the ridge dividing the waters that flow into the lake from those that flow into the Ohio. It is said to have been practically a perfect skeleton. Mr. Hahn for a time took the skeleton around the country, making money from his find by exhibiting it. He finally sold it for $1800.

Eventually it drifted into the hands of P. T. Barnum, the showman, who exhibited it for a number of years. It was among his museum properties that were lost when his museum in New York burned. Many similar finds, more or less perfect, have since been made, so that the museums of the country are well supplied with either real skeletons of mastadons or plaster casts made exactly like the originals.

London's Strand.

BY TEMPLE MANNING.

"You needn't go up into Norway,
You'll find him in every doorway;
Down the Strand,
That's the land
Of the Midnight Son."

That's what a famous English music hall singer warbled thirty or so years ago. It was true of the Strand then, and it hasn't changed a bit since. Day and night are all the same to London's busiest spot. It is the one place in which the night life followers of New York feel perfectly at home. Never a dull moment. Broadway at its best, or worst, according to how you look at it.

The character of the Strand naturally has changed a good deal with the march of the years. Back in the sixteenth century, when the Strand skirted the banks of the Thames—before its direction was changed—there stood upon the roadway many imposing mansions belonging to the nobility. Gardens stretched to the river, and there was an entire absence of the bustle which marks the Strand of 1930. Today, where stately houses once held sway, banks, shops, hotels, theaters, music halls and even drinking bars hold forth.

And that brings us to Simpson's eating house—"Simpson's in the Strand," as the knowing ones speak of it. The roast beef of Old England, the kind the choruses in musical plays always sing about while waving papier-mache ale cups in the air, is what has made Simpson's famous. Here one carves one's own slice from the roast wheeled on the table on a sort of tea wagon and helps one's self to the horseradish and vegetables. If you have read Dickens you know Simpson's. If you have ever visited an Englishman in the "city" no doubt you have been taken to Simpson's.

At the section of the Strand known as Charing Cross stands another of London's monuments of antiquity. The Gothic monument, which now seems a little bit out of place in its surroundings, was placed there by Edward I to mark the spot where the coffin of his consort was set down for the last time before it was placed in its final resting place in Westminster abbey.

Let us get next to Whitehall, and supposing we get there at 11 in the morning, let us stop for the mounting of the Royal Horse Guards, which takes place each morning at this time. There is always a crowd nearby to watch this ceremony, and often this crowd is made up of substantially the same persons eager to watch this colorful and picturesque ceremony. It is one way the Briton has of telling the world he is fond of the pomp and glory of the world, and that he doesn't care who knows it.

Everything Worth While.

BY ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

What do you suppose William the Conqueror said when he was at the height of his fame and kingly glory? That he would gladly surrender his crown and kingdom—for what?

"To know again peace of mind, the love of a true friend, or the innocent sleep of a child."

Why envy a king?

With good health, no matter how thin your purse may be, you can have peace of mind, the respect of your neighbors and enjoy the innocent sleep of a child. Your mind will operate normally if it is enthroned in a well-nourished brain. You will have good nature and a friendly disposition if your digestion is what it should be. You will sleep like a babe if your body and mind are normal.

After all, it is not a crown, jewels or palaces that bring contentment. To serve your fellow men and to have the vigor to serve well—what better career can be had by any one of us? No matter how humble the station, vigorous health will make you happy in it.

I often think of the poverty-stricken multitudes in this great world. It takes the edge off happiness to think of their misery. Yet the slums of great cities attract me. In every part of the world I have visited them. It makes me shiver to recall some of the sights I have witnessed.

But, after all, it is not the barrenness of the sunless quarters; it is not the filth and dirt; it is not the scant supply of food—it is not these things that send the dagger of pity into the heart of the visitor. It is the effect of these conditions upon the health of the unfortunate victims of poverty and unemployment—that is what makes slum life so dreadful.

No matter how many of the luxuries you are denied, if you can get the essential food and sleep in the fresh air you can snap your fingers at fate. Fortune can not long resist red blood and glorious health.

The first step toward "good luck," as it is called, is to have health, with the vigor and good nature that go with it. It is a passport to everything worthwhile in life.

William conquered England, but at the last lost everything he longed to possess. You may have what the Conqueror missed.

John Joachim Be[illegible].

BY ARCHIBALD HE[illegible]ON.

One of the most extraord[illegible] substances ever fabricated in the histo[illegible]emistry, or shall we say, alchemy, was [illegible]n." It held its place for two centuries; [illegible] the means of giving enormous stimul[illegible]emical research. Although the theo[illegible]ein this "fire principle" was not correct, i[illegible] important generalization which appeal[illegible] to the scientific mind. "The sparkle of the [illegible] there, and men followed it until it led t[illegible] into a clearer day."

The word "phlogiston," de[illegible] from a Greek word meaning "something [illegible]." This was defined as "the combu[illegible] substance, a principle of fire, but not [illegible] itself." Every substance, according to [illegible] theory, was composed of a "calx" or [illegible] and a certain amount of phlogiston. Beca[illegible] from a metallic calx—oxide—the metal [illegible] could be recovered by burning with charcoal, [illegible] metal was held to have absorbed "phlogist[illegible]" in the process from the charcoal which, having mostly disappeared, was regarded as almost pure phlogiston. Conversely, when the metal was calcined—or oxidized—by burning without charcoal, it was held to have lost it phlogiston.

This singular theory actually accounted for the facts; and was long accepted by the world's leading scientists.

The man who fathered this strange and influential theory was John Joachim Becher—1625-1682. His father, a teacher and an able linguist, subsequently became pastor at Speyer, capital of the Bavarian Palatinate. Although he wrote some books and had a gift for expression, his son wrote in slovenly and barbarous style.

This young boy, although he had little formal education, bought books out of his slender earnings as a teacher, and acquired a strange smattering of theology, medicine, politics and law. Through favoritism on the part of the ruler of Mainz, he was made the ruler's personal physician and appointed professor of medicine at the University of Mainz. Thus, at the outset of his career, he was undeservedly elevated to a dizzy eminence. It completely turned his head, and probably is responsible for making him a colossal charlatan rather than a true scientist.

Like many other alchemists and quacks of that time, he dabbled with all sorts of queer experiments: turning sand into gold, making a perpetual motion clock, inventing a lamp that would burn forever! He wrote one useful book, "Physica Subterranea," by which he is best known in science. Bernard Jaffe, the author of Crucible, says, "His only lasting contribution to applied chemistry was his experimental discovery of the gas ethylen, which he prepared by the action of commonalcohol on sulphuric acid.—Copyright, 1930, International Feature Service, Inc.

New York Day by Day.

BY O. O. McINTYRE.

New York, Sept. 2—To my notion the fascinating hour along Broadway is between 6:30 and 7:30 in the evening. It is the period when the street throws off its mask and becomes humanized. Sightseers disappear and Broadway is left to its grifters, its denizens.

Bright-eyed girls with that strained vivacity eddy into doorways to whisper amorously to hawk-nosed, pimply youths who affect airplane wing shoulders and yawning boredom. Actors with police dogs and chorus girls with Pekes and Pomps drift from side street roominghouses.

Jobless musicians with flowing ties group along curbs awaiting the break. Taxi drivers sink in their seats to peruse the morning tabloids. Gold-roped doormen drift across sidewalks to movie ticket cages and chat with the unsmiling blondes inside.

The flux of life congeals. Ladies about town drop artifices and talk to people they know without usual guile. They are conscious of that economic complexity of their lives—the struggle to live and support their men, too. Orange juice jerkers relax and swap nifties.

Policemen enjoy the hour as an interlude in the turmoil. They chaff and skylark. Near Irving Berlin's music publishing house in the upper Forties will be found song writers wrestling with new themes, knitting brows over new gags.

Old men at corner news hutches settle on camp chairs to puff pipes. Touts, gigolos and the rest of the easy-money boys, like those white wiggly things emerging from suddenly-lifted rocks, fill chop houses for copious cups of black coffee.

Clerks hang to awning ropes and become neighborly from doorways. Ballyhoo men of sucker and notch-joints and bediamoned auctioneers drop the professional manner. It is a fleeting hour and the street as suddenly stiffens into spunglass brittleness. Broadway is Broadway again.

A Washington Daybook.

BY HERBERT PLUMMER.

Washington, Sept. 2—When word drifted down from upstate New York that the Democrats of the Schenectady district had put Mrs. Hugh Miller in the field against "Doc" Frank Crowther in an effort to win his seat in congress, oldtimers in Washington sat up and took notice.

For to them it meant the possible return of the woman who eighteen or twenty years ago was the toast of the capital.

Mrs. Hugh Miller was Izetta Jewell then and probably the most beloved local actress ever to appear on a stage in Washington.

Izetta Jewell was leading lady of the famous old Poli's stock company and at that time had the theatergoers of this city literally at her feet.

She was a special favorite of the so-called congressional group in the capital. Such men as Frank Hitchcock, who then was postmaster general in the Taft administration, were among her most ardent admirers. And later on, President Wilson, a devotee of the theater, went frequently to Poli's, where Izetta Jewell was leading lady.

In the same company was her sister, Hazel. The two young women were not only popular because of their stage work, but were social favorites as well. Izetta Jewell's waffle breakfasts, given on Sunday mornings at her apartment on Connecticut avenue, where she lived with her mother, were famous.

At these affairs one frequently would find members of congress, diplomats and representatives of official and residential society.

After several eminently successful seasons, Izetta Jewell announced that she would quit the stage and marry. And she named as her husband-to-be—Representative William G. Brown of West Virginia.

The news came as a surprise to her friends and public, because it had been predicted freely that a great career on the stage for her was in the offing. David Belasco came to Washington while she was appearing at Poli's and saw her two nights in succession.

A friend of Belasco's remarked to him: "Her voice is more like Mrs. Leslie Carter's than any I have ever heard."

And it is said Belasco looked up quickly and replied:

"Have you noticed that, too?"

But Izetta Jewell's departure from the stage was final. She steadfastly refused to consider attractive offers to return. When her husband died she attempted to succeed him in congress, but was defeated. After this reversal she settled down to the task of managing his large estate in West Virginia.

In April of 1927 she was married to Dr. Hugh Miller, who at that time was on the faculty of George Washington university in the capital. They subsequently moved to Schenectady, where Dr. Miller is professor of civil engineering at Union college.

Dining Room Sparkles After Touch of Modernizing Hand

SIMPLICITY IS AID TO BEAUTY

uilt-in Buffet and Similar Effects Not Desired by Modernists.

An examination of 54 house plans buildings recently constructed vealed the fact that the dining ms of these dwellings were be- constructed without the built- buffets that were so popular years ago.

The housewives of today are fying that the dining room be structed simple, and unadorned th built-in effects.

The before and after views on s page show a typical dining om of the old style and its mod- ized sister. The tendencies of times are plainly indicated.

Buffet Clashes With Furniture

The built-in buffet often does harmonize with the furniture the room. It adds a note of dis- d to the decorative scheme, for built-in buffet, being inflexi- in design, remains the same, ugh the furniture of the room changed.

Today, when period furniture of asing design is used in the aver- dining room, the housewife uld rather use a movable buffet t matched the rest of the furni- e than to try to overcome the cordant element of the built-in niture.

Lighting Fixtures Modern

The dining room of today de- nds largely on its furniture to ry the modern appeal. The light- fixtures and the wall decora- ns should be chosen to har- nize as the growing use of side ll brackets for lighting makes m a part of the wall decorative ign.

The modern dining room in the stration at the left has the side hts, but a central chandelier nging from the ceiling may be d if the occasion warrants. In view at the bottom will be ed the older type of fixture— inverted globe flooding the light glaringly on the table without illuminating the far corners of the room. The heavy fringes of the chandelier are entirely out of keeping with the modern spirit of design.

Painted Walls Popular

The plain walls of the dining room are due to the use of flat paint for decorative purposes. The color scheme selected is light as this increases the apparent spaciousness of the room. Many modern dining rooms are canvas covered, narrow strips of moulding being placed in rectangles to give the French paneling effect.

The use of pictures in the dining room is restrained now. No longer are oil paintings of game and fruit plentifully scattered around the walls. One or two pictures are permissible if they harmonize successfully with the decorative design of the room.

Plenty of Light Desirable

When modernizing the dining room, it is important to secure plenty of light and fresh air. When the windows in the room are few the openings should be enlarged to permit the use of a bay or two or three windows. Nothing promotes more enjoyment of the meal than pleasant surroundings induced by a flood of sunlight. A garden outside so situated that it affords a pleasant vista when the family is at the table adds to the pleasure of the room.

The illustration to the left shows a bay of steel windows of the casement type. Casement windows, with their slender steel bars and small panes of glass are growing in popularity among home owners. The out-swinging ventilators catch any passing breeze and deflect currents of air into the room.

The snow white linen and the gleaming silverware add a note to the room as a whole. Good linens are always in style for they express the best of taste. Many housewives when adding to their stock of linens are purchasing a set in color—delicate greens, orchids and pinks.

Considering how little most men care for eating fish, it is a little mysterious why they like to catch them.

Relief in intuition fosters prejudice.

HOME DESIGN COMES FIRST

Change in Style After Modernization Must Be Pleasing, Lasting to Owner.

When the problem of modernizing the home comes up for solution, one of the first questions that must be answered concerns that of the exterior appearance of the house.

What style of building design is best suited for the home that is to be modernized?

Logically the answer will depend largely on the old lines of the house. The builder must work with the materials at hand and with the main layout of the house already established, he must use his best art in creating a finished product that is in keeping with modern architecture.

Yet it must be remembered that the house when modernized is to be used as it comes from the builder for many years. The amount of money invested in modernization precludes frequent changes in the exterior of the dwelling. Whatever style of architecture that is elected is the style that the home owner is going to live with for the next decade or so. The remodeled house must look satisfactory then.

For this reason, the exterior appearance of the house must be in a design that is always in vogue. The outer aspect of the house must be striking, yet conservative enough to be lasting.

Avoid Freakishness

The first rule is to avoid freakish styles of architecture. They are usually passing—the vogue for a year or so, but soon out of date. The average home owner cannot afford to select such a design because his pocket book will not allow him to change the other lines when he realizes that is no longer in vogue.

When remodeling the exterior lines of the house the best plan is to advise the builder to choose a style of architecture that is standard and will stay so for years to come.

A number of these types of design are receiving the favorable attention of home owners today. Among these are the Colonial, the Dutch Colonial and the English. Each of these types is distinctive in appearance. Each is attractive and in the best of taste. Better than this, each will remain a popular design, because each is based on sound architectural principles.

Colonial Architecture

Colonial architecture is an American expression of what is known in England as Georgian. It is generally recognized as the one distinctive American architectural expression. The characteristics of the Colonial house are simplicity, symmetry and quiet dignity. Generally its plan is regular and in the form of a rectangle so it is an economical house to build.

The roof is simple, with a narrow cornice made up of well formed mouldings. The dormers are always small and few in number. There is a certain primness about the Colonial house which results from the nicely spaced windows, its careful details and restrainment from effect.

The architectural detail of the Colonial home are always effective. The door is generally the important element of the facade. Shutters are usually used on the windows and are painted in contrast to the body of the house.

Design Is Standard

The Colonial style is standard. It will be in good demand today, and will be in good demand tomorrow. The owner of a Colonial home is investing in a home that is always acceptable to a buyer.

The Dutch Colonial house is also rectangular in shape, thus securing economy in space and materials. It is characterized by a roof which covers the side of the second light the interior of this story of the house.

Both the interior and exterior of the Dutch Colonial house show an afford to select such a design befloor, and by broad dormers that effort to secure maximum living space without sacrificing a pleasing effect. It makes an ideal home for the moderate size family. Like the Colonial it is a home that will stay in style because architecturally its principles of design are sound. The home owner who wants to remodel his house to get distinctive lines and economy of space will do well to consider this type of American home.

The charm of the English house with its many gables, its quaint chimney pots and broad areas of casement windows, effectively balancing the wall masses, cannot be denied. This type of house is steadily growing in popularity.

Claim 50 Degrees Safe Temperature for Food

Food to be kept in good condition must be maintained in a temperature of 50 degrees or lower. Scientists have proved that food, when allowed to remain in a temperature above that figure, decays quickly and bacteria multiply 400 times more rapidly than when kept in a temperature below 50 degrees which is the danger line of food deterioration.

Proper refrigeration will maintain food in good condition while it is waiting to be used.

Yet strange as it may seem throughout the United States only 34.6 per cent of homes are equipped with refrigerators of any kind.

It's Your A&P Store

as the town you live in is yours

Housewives, visiting a young merchant's store in 1859, found goods on his shelves they liked—and—as housewives do—told others.

Thus, A & P's business grew from this single store. First one customer brought another. Then one neighborhood brought another.

A & P has not forgotten why it outgrew a single store. It knows it must make good in each community if its stores are to be supported by many.

Because A & P realizes this, the A & P store nearest you is run by your townsmen. Men in your own locality keep your store in touch with the A & P system. The food on its shelves is there because you have asked for it.

A & P is made up of many such stores, just as the United States is made up of many communities like your own. Your A & P store serves you better because it is part of a large system, just as your community suits you better because it is part of a great nation.

CHAPTER 35

Startling News

So Dagger drove up to the palace that evening, alone, trusting absolutely to herself, her ability to read character, her capacity to handle men and to control any situation.

The palace guard turned out for her. A handsome, young officer of the Tu-chun's staff received her in the courtyard, and conducted her past the motionless sentries into the great hall, very foreign in appearance, despite the wealth of Chinese ornaments scattered about in careless profusion. Chang, himself, appeared immediately from a curtained doorway, austere, proudly deferential.

"I appreciate your coming," he said simply. "If you are not fatigued, would you care to see my collections?"

Dagger assented enthusiastically. She had heard of the countless beautiful objects he possessed, spoil of years unchecked lootings, the most valuable collection of Chinese curios and art in the whole world, men said. And she followed him from room to room with unaffected pleasure. Here were representative pieces from all the several periods of the golden ages of China's past; pottery, porcelain, exquisitely-painted panels, carvings in ivory, in wood, in stone, in jade. Ah, the jade! She was acquiring an appreciation of this essentially Chinese stone, and never had she seen such matchless jades as Chang possessed. Armor, too, and ancient weapons; garments, lay and priestly, crusted with gold and silver and precious stones. Jewels in heaps and trays.

Unperceving all else, she climbed with him from floor to floor, passing sentries and chamberlains, until they came to a massive door, where two immensely fat men mounted guard. These stood aside at a word from Chang, who paused with one hand on the heavy bronze handle.

"You have seen my treasures," he said. "Here are my wives."

And he pushed the door open, leaving a space for her to look through upon a scene which impressed Dagger as presenting the appearance of a meeting of a women's bridge-club in San Antonio—allowing for the fact that all the members had come in their kimonos.

There were 20 or 30 women in the large room, fat women, thin women, beautiful women, women with intellectual faces, woman with lovely, vapid faces, blonde women, dark women, white women, brown women, yellow women. Some were drinking tea, some were nibbling candy, some were playing games, some were sewing and gossiping. It was precisely the kind of scene which might be going on in thousands of homes all over the United States. There was actually the same disorderly buzz of conversation, which was choked off abruptly as Chang stepped in the doorway.

He gave Dagger the one bird's-eye view, and closed the door, a grin of what she interpreted as irony twisting his lips. Her mind was spinning dizzily. Why this revelation, obviously so dramatically staged? But Chang gave her no clue.

"Come," he said. "I fear I have bored you. And dinner should be ready."

Dagger murmured that she wasn't bored and indeed, she was enthralled. The evening promised better than she had anticipated, although she couldn't very well say so, and she returned downstairs, walking demurely at his side, trying to guess what would happen next.

Chang led her through a series of rooms on the ground floor to a terrace set in the midst of a formal Chinese garden. The grass was groomed as carefully as a thoroughbred's hide; the stars were reflected in a pool where waterlilies grew; and a soft wind, sighing up from the war-torn south, rustled the branches of trees that were half-unseen. Overhead, the sky was a speckled purple vault. The one definite spot in the clustering shadows was a small table, appointed in western style, about which hovered several servants, whom Chang waved away as he seated Dagger opposite his own place.

He seemed to have forgotten the recent incident. The conversation he started as the first course was served led to political subjects, the roles the western powers had played in China, the undermining of the empire by the opium war and the Tai-ping rebellion two generations since, climaxed by the Boxer uprising.

He spoke of the impetus to Chinese liberalism which had been applied by the students sent to America through the repayment of the Boxer indemnity; and the consequent intoxication of a people who still dwelt mentally in the middle ages, and whose traditional philosophy and folk-ways must be completely amended before they could distinguish between the good and the bad in western civilization.

It was as absorbing to Dagger as all her recent experiences, and she threw out frequent comments, which brought grim nods of approval or curt: "You see it, Mrs. Vaneering!" "Yes, but not many foreigners have the patience to weigh that." Finally, she interjected:

"But didn't Blaine—Mr. Howard—sympathize with all your ambitions, General?"

Chang frowned over her shoulder in the odd, blank way that was one of his characteristics.

"More than any westerner who has tried to inderstand us. But we will come back to that. First, I have something to say to you."

And the cold, nerve-twisting hand of drama clamped down upon Dagger's heart.

"Yes?" she responded mechanically.

His eyes settled upon hers, possessive, dominating.

"All this is mine," he continued, waving his arm, with its silver-tipped fingers, to include the surrounding darkness. "Sung-fu is but the beginning, 200,000 square miles, 30,000,000 people. But—the beginning. Someday, if I live, I will rule all China. I will be emperor, constitutional emperor. I do not believe in your democracy any more than I believe in a divine son of heaven."

He stopped, and his eyes bored harder into hers.

"A man such as I am must have a woman to keep pace with him. I did not know that until recently. I thought women were toys to amuse a man's ease. But that is one thing you westerners have discovered. Now and then, very rarely, there are women a man may treat as an equal. You are that kind of woman."

Another pause, and Dagger resisted by a conscious effort the commanding influence of those narrow, jetty eyes.

"You have seen my wives," he said bluntly. "I will put them all away. I have a palace in the hills where they can be comfortable—grow old quarreling together," he added cynically. "You are different You are my equal. Will you, as you westerners say, marry me? I do not know what that means, but I will accept whatever terms you make." He leaned closer toward her. "I want you for my empress. Together we wil make China over."

Dagger shut her eyes to keep out that piercing stare. She had a sensation of numbness. How ridiculous! How flattering! How preposterous! How just plain silly! She was being proposed to by a Chinaman. How Uncle Jim would rave if he knew it! And Blaine-her head cleared. She reopened her eyes, and met Chang's fearlesssly, level-browed.

"I know you offer me a great honor," she said. "But I belong to another man—who was your friend."

Chang frowned.

"To a man you must think of as dead?" he asked.

"Yes, although I never belonged to him living."

The frown left the Tu-chun's face.

"More than ever I see you were meant to be my empress," he said. "But such loyalty is not to be despised. You have not loved in vain, Mrs. Vaneering. Blaine Howard is alive."

Jubilee's Pardner

A Story of Humorous Boyhood Adventure

By JUDD MORTIMER LEWIS

TODAY was Tuesday. I laid a long time when I had woke up, and looked at Jubilee, and thought how a week from next Monday I would have to begin to go to school again. Then when I had let him down and had went down and done my work and was grabbing off a few pancakes, and the girls came in my grandfather said: "Where is Saylomey?" They said they didn't know, and my grandfather said it was quite a show she put on. My father said it was no worse than they were having in the theaters in New York all the time. My grandfather said, "Are you sure of that?" My father said, "Yes. Why?" My grandfather said I was just thinking I needed a vacation, and I was wondering what was the fare to New York?" Then everyone laughed. I didn't see anything to laugh at.

When I got outside Feeble said to lets go over to Gimmie's before we went to the pasture. I didn't want to, but everyone else did, so we went. Gimmie was playing with a doll, and her mother was sewing on buttons on the shady side of the house, and she said: "What happened over to your house, Thomas Aristides?" I got red and didn't say anything. But Feeble told her, and laughed and said that was what Gimmie had told her, and she said she must have looked sweet. I said she looked as sweet as a skun frog. Then everybody and Gimmie and her mother laughed like that was a joke. But it wasn't no joke. She did. Then her mother brung out some pictures of Gimmie when she was just big enough to walk, and she didn't have anything on but beads, and her father's cuffs on her ankles, and she was laughing and did look kinda pretty.

Then we all started to the pasture and stopped to get some grapes, but the owner supprized us and took us all up to his house and we thought we were going to be arrested, but he and his wife gave us some apples and told us to run along. When we started to go through the pasture there was a bull with a heavy headstall and a rope on and it was tried, and the man said don't go through there where that bull is. And Gimmie said, "Which is the bull?" And he said, "That red one." And she said, "The one with its face locked up?" And then whilst we were laughing she rolled under the fence and started acrosst the pasture, and the bull started to paw dirt, and the man grabbed a pitchfork and jumped the fence and got to Gimmie just as the bull broke loose, and he lammed it acrosst the nose twice with the pitchfork and stopped it, and he grabbed Gimmie by the shoulder and lifted her back over the fence. Then he shook Gimmie and called her a little devil, and told us all to get out. I wish we could get rid of Gimmie. She is littler than we are and ought to stay home. But she went to the pasture with us. I bet she'll get us in trouble yet.

Love's Reawakening

A Wife's Triumph Over Jealousy

BY ADELE GARRISON

Madge Dares Phil Veritzen's Wrath

I WAS thankful for Lillian's muttered warning of Philip Veritzen's entrance into the hotel dining room, for it enabled me to preserve a "poker face" when my employer came over to our table and paused beside it. Fresh in my memory was the absurd thing he had said when I had told him that I had not yet rejected his proffered bouquet for my green gown. He had murmured something fantastic about my indecision giving a fillip to his imagination, a suspense which he should enjoy. He had hung up the telephone before I could answer him, and if I had been unprepared for his appearance I am afraid I should have betrayed my confusion.

Mr. Veritzen Is Annoying

"'Lo, Phil!" Lillian seized the situation and commanded it to my infinite relief. "Sorry we can't squeeze you in at this table, but we're already four, and that's the tightest fit known to hotel tables. But sit down as near as you can. What's on the well-known mind?"

Mr. Veritzen bowed impressively, looked from Lillian to me.

"I am only insuring my promptness at my meeting with Mrs. Graham," he said, and managed to invest his speech with a confidential little air of understanding between us which annoyed me exceedingly.

"You are more prompt than I," I said with a casual air, ignoring the meaning glance he sent me. "But really Mrs. Underwood has but just returned with a description of the gowns to be worn tonight. While you lunch she and I will make out the list, so that we will not have to delay you any longer than necessary."

I tried to register the conviction that he had only come to our table to find out about the gowns for which he was sending flowers, and Lillian shyly telegraphed me a "bravo." But Mr. Veritzen was not to be dismissed so easily.

"Please do not hurry," he said. "You are not delaying me in the least. Indeed, I only came in here for luncheon to pass the time before two, when I expect the flowers I ordered."

There was a smug little air of complacence about him which was maddening. He reminded me suddenly of a plump spider sitting in the centre of his web and tentatively touching the different silvery strands to see what unwary victim had been drawn toward him. It was an absurd and fantastic comparison, but it remained in my mind when after our luncheon was ended Lillian took Mary back to our apartment with the promise to put her to bed, and Harry Underwood announced his intention of sleeping straight through the afternoon.

"Unless," he amended cheerily, "either of you gals need me, when I shall be 'Arry on the spot,' every bit as good as the historic 'Johnny'."

"Better," I told him, smiling, and felt an absurd little inclination to call him back and ask him to keep close to me while Mr. Veritzen remained in the room. But as we were the last in the dining room, Mr. Selbel cameup to us as soon as the Underwoods left and my unreasoning little panic left me.

"The florist's wagon is at the service entrance," he told me, "with your palms and flowering plants, and there are several boys here from another establishment with huge boxes of flowers."

"Ah!" said Mr. Veritzen, and I had an eerie impression that he was rubbing his hands together, although they really were motionless. "Those are the chaps I want to see. Where are they bringing the flowers?"

Mr. Selbel looked at me, adroitly elbowing Mr. Veritzen out of the conversation.

Mr. Selbel Takes Charge

"They will be put on the tables in the room just back of this," he said, "where you will have your dinner tonight and where your musicians will be stationed. You see, after the dining room is closed tonight the two rooms will be thrown together and the floors waxed. But, as I told you, all the decorations must be up by five o'clock, when the waitresses come back to arrange their tables."

"They will be," I said quietly, and then Mr. Veritzen struck in again, assertively.

"Are the flowers there now? I want to have them opened before the boys go back. They may have to be sent back."

Not a facial muscle of Mr. Selbel's moved, but I felt a compulsion to explain Mr. Veritzen's interference.

"Mr. Veritzen is munificently sending the cut flowers for the party," I said to Mr. Selbel airily and smiling at both men with a desperate attempt at archness. "You see, I am giving the party for our niece, Miss Harrison, who is engaged to Mr. Veritzen's son, and who is also a stage protegee of his."

I fairly held my breath as I finished this daring little speech. What would my employer say?

Governor Cooper Pays Tribute To Ohio's Workers in Address Here

FOLLOWING is the text in part of Gov. Myers Y. Cooper's Labor day address, heard by more than 2,000 persons at Crystal Lake park yesterday afternoon:

"I am pleased to come to Marion to address a part of Ohio's great army of wage earners.

"Our state holds an enviable position in its productivity in industrial development and this is so because Ohio boasts of 1,500,000 intelligent and willing workers.

"The fact that our state stands third in point of industrial development, producing and marketing in excess of five million dollars worth of finished products, annually, is, in itself, an eloquent testimony of the great strides we have made.,

Proud of Accomplishment

"Certainly, we may be proud of what has been accomplished and on this day as the wheels of industry are stilled we pay tribute to that great silent host of workers who have been a most potent factor in the building up of our state and in contributing to the tremendous progress of our nation.

"Labor day is set aside in honor of those who do the world's work—the great army of persons who man our factories, run our mills, give life to our transportation system, dig our coal, print our newspapers, and perform countless other services to produce our multitudinous products, which a civilization such as ours require

"This day honors that group which seeks to bring into being a new realization of democracy which affords opportunity for justice and personal development in every relation of life.

"With but six per cent of the population of the world we make and sell 50 per cent of the manufactured products of the world and that in competition with a foreign wage of 25 cents to every dollar which we pay our workers here in America. Thus, we have an answer which can readily be appraised.

Conditions Improved

"The facts are that wages, working conditions and living conditions have been improved largely through the courageous attitude of faithful leaders in the ranks of labor who have seen the importance of the conservation of human values overleaping that of the mechanical.

"Trade unions have advocated education, knowing that knowledge is power. They have founded benefactions and paid millions of dollars to their members. They have helped to increase wages and to secure reasonable hours of labor from employers who not infrequently have thought only of material interest, leaving the human element entirely out of their consideration.

"They have helped to abolish sweat shop conditions in the great cities of our nation and to bring about regulatory measures preventing evils of child labor which means the conservation of national well-being.

"The state of Ohio has been a leader in matters of progressive legislation for the betterment of the condition of labor.

"It will be remembered that Ohio was one of the very first states in the union to enact a workmen's compensation law, and it is, indeed, gratifying to know that this leadership has been followed by many states of the union in the enactment of laws of a similar nature, following closely the Ohio statute

"It is a source of pride, I am sure, to all friends of labor, and I assure you it is a matter of pride to me, that my good friend, William M. Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, was the man who introduced the Workmen's Compensation bill into the general assembly of our state. Under the law, as enacted, injured workers, families of those who have lost their lives while engaged in the occupations, those suffering from occupational diseases are not a matter of indifference and neglect, but they are given financial assistance when it is really needed—when the bread winner is incapacitated. This is a fine humanitarian law and at the last general assembly, at the request of the legislative committee of labor, the following bills were passed:

"Senate bill 207, authorizing the utilities commission to make and enforce order relating to the protection, welfare, and safety of railroad employes.

"Senate bill 243, adding three diseases to the number of occupational diseases for which workmen shall receive compensation.

"Senate bill 245, authorizing appointment of referees by industrial commission in order to speed up determination of claims of workmen's compensation.

"It goes without saying that the theory of a mere living wage has long since passed out of our economic program and is no longer in the minds of those who are thinking in terms of the contentment, happiness, and general improvement of the condition of the workers of our land.

Entitled to More

"They are entitled to something more than a mere living wage. They are entitled to a wage which will enable them, if you please, to enjoy some of the luxuries of life, and above all, to educate their children, to have comfortable homes, and through proper frugality lay up something for the rainy day, a recompense for old age.

"Labor, in seeking a wage commensurate with the service rendered, is directly placed on the road to better living conditions, better home environment, and better educational opportunities.

"The precepts of the Golden Rule have ever been the guiding star in the efforts of those in the labor movement who are honestly and sincerely striving toward self-betterment.

"That was the attitude of the great leaders whose vision, ambition and courage laid the cornerstone for the constructive work which has been done for the betterment of the workers of America.

"In the administration of public affairs, I have not only sought to render such aid as is within my power in helping develop constructive legislation for the benefit of the workers, but in the administration of the department of industrial relations, I am glad to point with pride to a program of betterments which I believe will meet the approval of industry, that pays into the fund, and of labor, that benefits from it.

"We have had some economic disturbances with rather serious consequences affecting employment and business generally.

"The President of the United States called upon the governors of the various states to unite with him in a program that would reduce unemployment to a minimum. It was his suggestion that the time had come when through prudent expenditure of public money various public building projects should go forward.

Ohio Responses

"The state of Ohio responded promptly to his suggestion. The various local units of government were called upon to join with state and nation in speeding road building and other public improvements. We asked cooperation in the letting of all public projects to the extent of 70 per cent for the first six months.

"In addition, committees were organized in 80 counties to find jobs and to contact with public enterprises so that our entire public program would move steadily forward.

"More recently we have had a drouth situation of far-reaching consequences. In 43 counties, 12 per cent of the people are compelled to haul water for their families and livestock. Our corn crop will be 60,000,000 bushels short of a five year average of 135,000,000, and 27 per cent shortage in our oat crop. Feed, therefore, is of the greatest importance in preventing wholesale disposal of live stock at ruinous prices.

"It will be necessary to work out a plan providing long time loans for farmers until normal conditions again prevail.

"The railroads have generously offered a 50 per cent reduction in freight rates on feed and, in addition, I have directed the director of highways to allocate $1,000,000 additional road funds throughout the stricken areas for road-building purposes, this sum to be used directly in the employment of farmers affected by drouht conditions.

"There is available $350,000 additional of federal highway funds which can be used in drouth areas, for a like purpose.

"Committees are being organized in each county, headed by the county farm agent, who will deal with each case individually and make sure that practical aid will be at hand for all drouth sufferers.

"These economic problems are serious. They do not solve themselves, either through fault-finding or unwarranted criticism. The solution will be found in sincerity of purpose and in the capability with which we deal with such situations as they do arise.

Nation Is Rich

"America is powerful and rich. There is every indication that we have reached the turning point and that things are better. In a talk with the President within the last two weeks, he gave it as his judgment that we would be well on the way out of economic disturbance if we did not face at this time the terrific drouth situation.

"What greater happiness can come to any man than in the knowledge that he has rendered worthwhile service to others.

"James John Davis secretary of labor, who as a boy was an iron puddler says, 'The most real thing in my life has been the good fellowship I have enjoyed with my fellow workmen as we have toiled together at the hardest kind of skilled labor in front of the blazing furnace.'

"'Those,' said he 'were the great days when we were building muscle, mind and character, with satisfaction.'

"Count Tolstoy has tersely characterized work as happiness, for he said 'The happiness of man consists in life, and life is labor."

"Calvin Coolidge points out work is not a curse, it is the prerogative of intelligence, the only means to manhood and the measure of civilization—the growth of sentiment which despises work is an appeal from civilization to barbarism.

"There is no greater satisfaction that can come to any man than the compensation which comes from being one of the nation's builders.

"'Progress, prosperity and world markets are not for a white collared nation,' said Senaor Capper. 'If we are to hold our place in world commerce we shall have to roll up our sleeves, overcome our aversion to soiling our hands and learn again the blessedness, the health and the joy of productive labor.'

"Congressman Grant E. Mouser, one of our foremost congressmen, is to be praised for his service to the people of this district and state in his activities before the state utilities commission as assistant attorney general. In several fights against large utilities he has won victories that have meant savings to the people.

"The greatest tragedy of life is that one should take more out of industry's storehouse than he puts into it.

Lovett To Give Talk on Europe Wednesday

GREEN CAMP, Sept. 2—An illustrated talk on a trip to Europe will be given at the Reformed church west of here Wednesday night by Roy N. Lovett, vocational agriculture teacher. Lovett recently returned from Europe where he spent the summer.

Labor Unions, Churches Hold Joint Services

Rev. M. L. Buckley Preaches Sermon at Epworth M. E.; Rev. C. E. Turley, Pastor, Presides; Minister Says Church Not Rich Man's Organization.

"The trouble with the United States just now is that we have been gambling—squandering our earnings. Our President Hoover was right when he said 'We are slipping off of our foundation.'"

This was the central thought of the Labor day sermon preached Sunday night at Epworth M. E. church by Rev. M. L. Buckley on the occasion of the first union meeting of the Marion churches and Marion Central Labor union. There was a large representation of the Labor union members and of members of churches of the city.

Dr. C. E. Turley, pastor of Epworth church, presided.

Rev. Buckley's sermon in part was as follows:

Jesus Was Worker

"It is not unusual to preach to laboring people. In my experience the last 30 years, nine-tenths of my congregations have been composed of laboring people. Jesus was a carpenter and worked at his trade. At no time did he complain of hardship, nor was he ashamed of being a laboring man. He gave the world the Golden Rule to use in adjusting their differences. Every honest man and woman believes in it and if we practiced it, there would be enough of this world's good for all, and we would be the happiest people in the world.

"The church that Christ established is not a rich man's organization. A pastor recently said, 'When we stand at the foot of the Cross we are all on the same level.'

"After Lord Balfour, the great Englishman, had visited North and South Americas he asked the president of the Republic of Brazil this question: 'Why is South America so behind the United States? You have the same climate and fertile soil.'

"The reply was to the effect that the Puritan's first act upon landing in America was to fall to their knees and worship God. But adventurers, men in search of gold, had settled South America, and had not been interested in religion or education.

Gives Comparison

"We have in the United States one-sixteenth of the population of the world and one-sixth of the world's wealth." At this point Rev. Buckley gave figures comparing the percentage of the world's products that the United States uses, and compared the U. S. wage with that of foreign countries, showing how large it is and how much more can be bought here with a single day's earnings than in any other country in the world.

"Every great moral movement in the United States has been fathered by the church—slavery, women's rights, world peace, temperance and child labor," he said. "The church is interested in labor and is helping to fight the battles for the rights of the laboring man.

"The church must be concerned about capital and labor. Especially when great corporations are taking over our public utilities.

"I am not talking revolution in the United States. We are an intelligent nation. There are seven votes in the laboring class to one in favor of capital. The trouble is we have been having such a good time that we have not cared much how things were going. I dare say not one in 10 laboring people went to the polls recently to see the right candidate nominated. If 50 per cent of labor was losing sleep over capital and labor, our congress and senate would begin to tremble for fear that something was wrong.

Law Enforcement Needed

"Another thing that needs attention is law enforcement. Lloyd George said recently in referring to Spain, Italy, Jugoslavia, Poland, Russia and China, 'Democraccy led badly or not led at all has landed all these countries into practical autocracy.' I ask who lives in Chicago, New York and our other great cities? At least 80 per cent of these people were born in the same countries Lloyd George names. A free government like ours means to them, 'Do as you please.'

"There is a gospel of play as well as a gospel of work. We need to consider our extravagance for it is beyond all proportion to our incomes. Last year your play cost us 21 billions of dollars. There is a spiritual side of work which is necessary to make life worthwhile. Henry Van Dyke calls it 'The Gospel of Labor'."

Smart playwrights keep in mind the peculiar talents of the actors who are likely to play the characters they put into the play.

Old men never count over the money they have wasted in their youth. It is too harrowing.

When Pain Comes

Two hours after eating

What many people call indigestion very often means excess acid in the stomach. The stomach nerves have been over-stimulated, and food sours. The corrective is an alkali, which neutralizes acids instantly. And the best alkali known to medical science is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. It has retained the standard with physicians in the 50 years since its invention.

One spoonful of this harmless, tasteless alkali in water will neutralize instantly many times as much acid, and the symptoms disappear at once. You will never use crude methods when once you learn the efficiency of this. Go get a small bottle to try.

Be sure to get the genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia prescribed by physicians for 50 years in correcting excess acids. 25c and 50c a bottle—any drugstore.

"Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of The Charles H. Phillips Chemical Company and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1875.—Adv.

OFFER REWARD FOR ARREST OF FORGER

Officials of Company Here In Probe of Man's Activities; Gets $1,000.

A $500 reward will be paid by the Western Union Telegraph Co. for information leading to the capture and conviction of a check forger who last week fleeced the company out of $1,000 it was announced today by W. J. Dugan, district manager of the company, who is here investigating the case.

Such information should be turned over to the local police department which holds a warrant for the man's arrest, Dugan said.

The swindler spent several days here last week and climaxed his visit by raising a $32 check to $1,032. He presented it to the telegraph company as the major payment on a $1,041 money order which he sent to himself, under another name, at Columbus. He returned to Columbus, called for the order there and cashed it.

He had established confidence at the local branch by presenting two certified checks on previous occasions, and both were reported good. The third, however, was presented last Wednesday afternoon when local banks were closed and a checkup thereby made impossible.

603 Automobile Bills of Sale Issued Here

Bills of sale issued by Clerk of Courts Everett B. Grigsby during August totaled 603, a checkup made today shows.

The big majority of the bills of sale were issued on used cars, while 65 were for new passenger cars and eight for new trucks.

The Stars Say—

Wednesday, September 3

The sidereal operations for this day must be read as having an adverse influence. There may be opposition and hostility from many quarters, open and secretive. Although the general trend of events is stirring and far-reaching, there is hint of sudden change or travel, but these may not be of a profitable nature; per contra, the finances are critically aspected, and there may be losses through speculation, insecure investments, fraud or litigation, unless conservatism and sagacity be employed.

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of a year calling for a general effort to safeguard the interests and finances from many unprofitable and perilous influences. New ventures, employment, litigation and unwise speculation are seen with menacing aspects, both subtle and flagrant. There may be sudden change, but be on guard against misrepresentation and fraudulent openings. A child born on this day, while, perhaps, energetic, ambitious and clever in many directions, should have sound economic and commercial principles instilled.

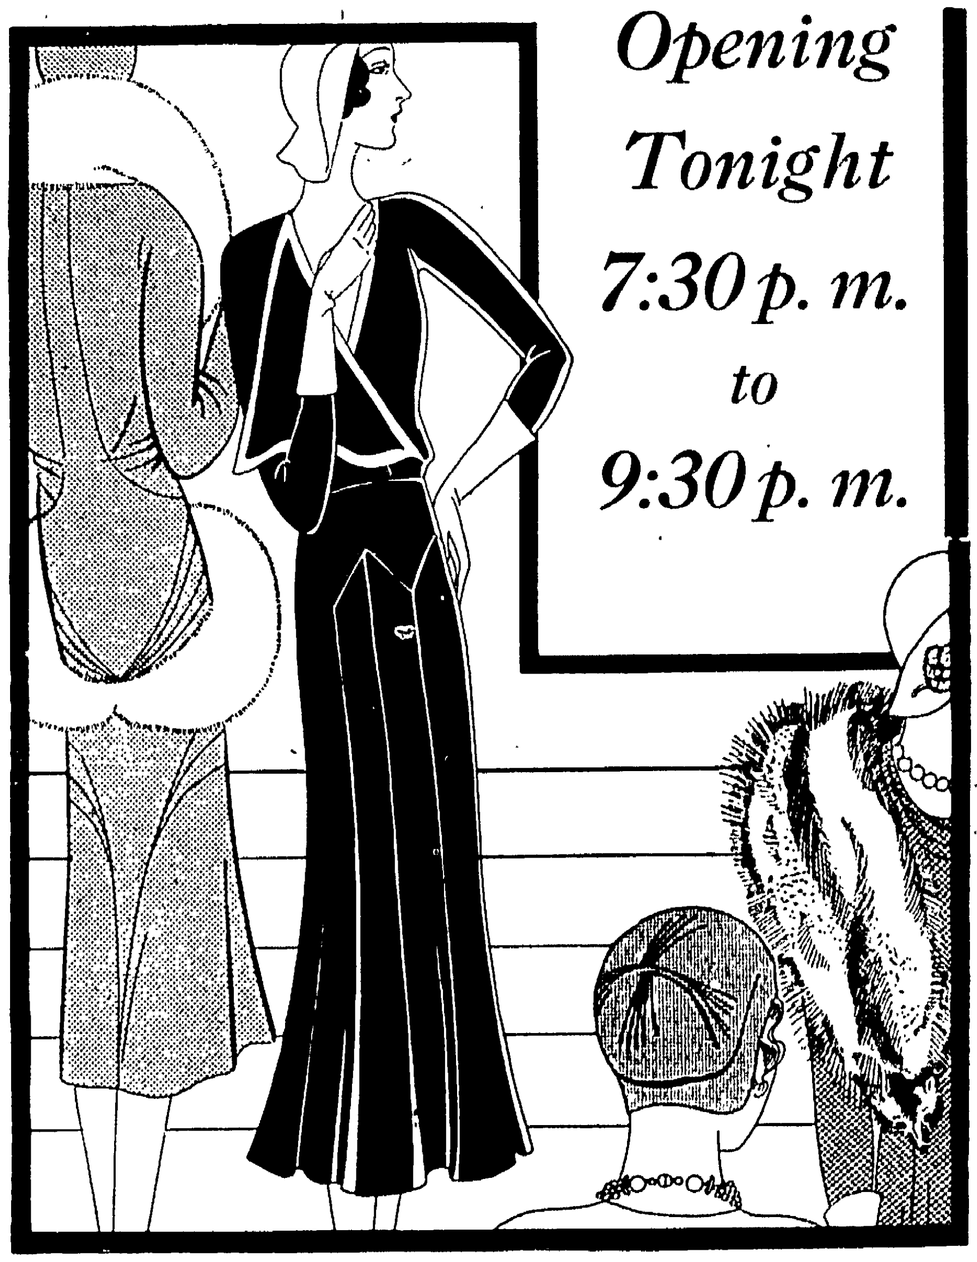
THE SHOP OF YOUTH

253 West Center Street

Invite the Consideration of the Women of Marion to the Inaugural of their New Shop of

READY-to-WEAR



Opening Tonight 7:30 p. m. to 9:30 p. m.

Our Policy

THIS is an independent store in the sense that it has no "chain" connection, but it is very dependent for its existence and growth upon the good will of the people of Marion. We realize that this is to be secured and maintained only thru the rendering of a superior service, and that the time-worn example of the man who preached a better sermon and made a better mouse-trap than his neighbor is still good logic in 1930.

The senior member of this concern is a "native son." He expects no unmerited favors on that account but, thru past experience in selling the local trade he believes that he knows the kind of ready-to-wear merchandise they have wanted and often found difficulty in getting. He knows, too, that they appreciate the individual attention and friendly courtesy that is next to impossible in the foreign-owned syndicate shops where volume and an established per cent of profit must rule above all other considerations.

So it is our hope to found a business built along high-class ethical lines that will gain and hold the public confidence and live to be a permanent institution in the city. An especially cordial welcome is extended to all visitors on Opening Night and, along with any kindly compliments and good wishes we invite any constructive criticism or suggestions that will enable us to work together in a perfect relationship of buyer and seller.

Our Lines

"THE SHOP OF YOUTH" is the name that probably best expresses the character of our merchandise. This doesn't mean that we cater only to the young. Along with our garments and accessories created exclusively for slender youth we will also handle the larger sizes for matronly age. Certain manufacturers specialize on giving to these, youthful lines and refinements that take years from a woman's age without the sacrifice of good taste, and these we shall handle at all times.

Our Specialties Are:

Junior, Misses and Women's Dresses.

MAYOR UPHELD IN DECISION

Morrow County Judge Rules Man Must Pay $1,000 Liquor Fine.

Special To The Star

MT. GILEAD, Sept. 2—Judge W. P. Vaughn of the Morrow county common pleas court ruled Saturday that a fine of $1,000 assessed by former Mayor C. W. McFarland against Pearl E. Richey must be paid. The fine was assessed several months ago when officers searched both Richey's flat and his poolroom and soft drink parlor.

A bottle of liquor which Richey admitted to be corn whisky was found in a coat pocket in a closet in the flat. A number of similar bottles were found in the poolroom. The fine was made by former Mayor McFarland when the evidence was presented and a plea of nolle contenders entered.

The case was appealed to the common pleas court. Richey's attorney claiming that the mayor did not have jurisdiction, that the liquor was seized in a bona fide dwelling and that the fine was excessive.

Judge Vaughn in his decision stated that the law specifically gives the mayor final jurisdiction in cases of possession which was the charge against Richey.

The Funeral from Our Home

OUR special, modernly constructed establishment furnishes every residence-like appointment: for the remains to rest, awaiting interment; a reception room for friends; a private room for the family; a service room—every requirement of home, but better equipped for the funeral than the home. And with the other far advanced ideas which distinguish our finer service, conducting the funeral from our home has become most preferred: especially, too, because there is no added cost. That advantage is worth considering.

REYNOLDS TOO GOOD FOR CHALLENGER

FOX TAKES DECIDING FALL IN 7 MINUTES

Labor Day All-Star Card at Crystal Lake Park Attracts Crowd Estimated Near 2,000.

BY BOB KIRKPATRICK
Sports Editor, The Star

After taking the first fall in 10 minutes with a leg split and losing the second in the same number of minutes when the challenger clamped on a body scissors, Jack Reynolds, fox of the welterweight grappling clan outsmarted Yaqui Joe the title aspirant and dumped him to the canvas for the deciding fall with a back slam that kayoed the Mexican and kept the champion crown securely resting on the present titlehead.

The Reynolds-Yaqui Joe match, which headlined an all-star card sponsored by the Convention Committee of Marion as a feature of the Labor Day program at Crystal Lake park attracted a crowd estimated to be between 1,500 and 2,000.

Exactly 27 minutes of actual wrestling time was consumed by the challenger and the champion in deciding that Yaqui Joe, the Mexican threat, had not developed to the point of perfection necessary to massage the canvas with the shoulders of the veteran Reynolds. It took Reynolds seven minutes to pin the invader for the third and deciding fall after losing the second of the first two.

Leg Split Wins

Demonstrating in the first fall, just why the welterweight crown has stood unmolested on his brow for such a long period of time Reynolds buffeted Yaqui Joe around the ring for about nine minutes in a manner that befitted a champion grappler. Suddenly fastening his dreaded leg split on the Mexican he forced his shoulders to the mat in exactly 10 minutes

In the first minutes of the second fall struggle the order of events pointed to a repetition of the first fall. Defensive wrestling on the parts of both grapplers kept thrills at a minimum. With a toe hold clamped on Yaqui Joe at nine minutes Reynolds looked to be on the way to a quick finish of another challenge when suddenly the Mexican slipped from the hold and, sent Reynolds crashing to the mat with a flying body scissors.

Mexican Threatens

Glory and the welterweight crown seemed almost within the grasp of the challenger in the battle for the third fall. Clamping a body scissors on the champion in the same manner as had won him the previous fall Yaqui Joe had the referee's hand in the air awaiting to proclaim a new titleholder when Reynolds slipped out of it and with lightning like dexterity dashed the aspirant's hopes to the mat with a back slam which gave him the deciding fall.

For those patrons of wrestling who like to see action and roughness crammed into their menu of grappling, the semi-final bout between Joe Banaski and Frank Wolfe filled the bill to the highest degree possible. Twenty-two minutes of rough and tough battling with first one on top and then the other preceded the famous arm stretch of Banaski's which brought him another well earned victory. Wolfe failed twice to successfully execute the dangerous crab hold, due mainly to apparent superior strength of Banaski.

Two Decisions

After Jack Gorman, the Toledo flash had battled for a half hour with Achieu the Chinese protege from Dayton referee Ed Beardsley gave his decision to the former. After he gave his decision the audience gave another, the later decision being interepersed with boos and hisses. When the final decision was given the same thing that always takes place in such a predicament happened. The referee won—Gorman won—and the audience booed. Although the referee awarded the match to Gorman on the strength of his allegedly having been on top the greater part of the half hour the Chink seemed to have the better of the argument most of the time.

Who Said Fight?

After having listened to ballyhoo for a long time proclaiming the abilities of both Joe Pangello of Galion and Babe Auskings of Mt. Vernon the crowd of spectators were all primed for an eight round battle that would give it something to talk about over the breakfast table this morning. When the eight rounds were completed and Pangello given the decision the crowd was still waiting for the fight to start. Pangello won the fight, but not because he was better than Auskings. It was a case of who was the worse. Cooing around the squared circle for eight rounds of an alleged fight, swinging an occasional haymaker that did no more damage than displace a certain amount of atmosphere the pair gave a beautiful impersonation of why neither will ever be more than a ham and egger unless they change their tactics.

Pangello looks like he might have something but why he hid it so effectively last night is something that has not been disclosed yet. Perhaps he did not want to make Auskings look worse than he was but the only thing he succeeded in doing by his methods was to make both of them look terrible.

SPORT RAMBLINGS

BY BOB ELLIOTT

WITH the paid attendance at the four games played so far in the Little World series having grossed a mere $425 or an average of better than $100 a game it's hard to predict what the total attendance at the end of the six or seven games may be. It seems a sure cinch that with the increased interest that's being taken in the games that standing room at the closing games is going to be at a premium. The game today should attract better than a $100 gate while the game Thursday between the winner today and the Erie Roundhouse has possibilities of reaching better than the $135 mark. You can use our own judgment as to the crowds at the final Lee Street game.

Plenty of local fight fans will probably take in the first Ohio championship fight in many years next Friday night when Young Jack Thompson defends his welter crown against Tommy Freeman in the Cleveland Indians' ball park on Lexington avenue. Preparations are being made to handle a capacity crowd of 35,000. The challenger is confident that he can repeat his one victory over Thompson that was scored in Detroit before the colored flash removed the welter title from Jackie Fields. The champion who is making his first defense of his title says that although Tommy licked him that night, Friday will be a different story.

THE two teams meeting today in the Little World series-Kappas and Calvary-present a good subject to dissert on a for a few moments. These Calvary boys are hitting way above 300 but can't win a ball game to save their necks. The Kappas aren't hitting and aren't fielding and consequently can't expect to win by much of a margin. However they're getting by far the best pitching in the series and they're still dangerous. The Roundhouse is almost a lost cause with their pitching corps, such as it was, almost ruined beyond repair and their renowned hitters batting at the handsome pace of 234 or thereabouts. And they wonder why they aren't winning. It all seems so simple.

Jack Dempsey is going into training soon in California, according to reports current on the West Coast.

Roy Rice Again To Try To Register Win Over Calvary

LOSING TEAM DROPS OUT OF SERIES AND WINNER PLAYS ERIE

"Kaps" Have Chance If They Can Overcome Weakness in Fielding.

BY BOB ELLIOTT

Once again Roy Rice will attempt to do the seemingly impossible. By this we mean pitch and win a ball game for the Kappas. So far in the Little World Series Rice has dropped a 2 to 1 decision to the Erie Roundhouse and finished in a tie with Calvary when he should have won at least the latter. Speculation is rather rife this morning as to what tricks the Kappas will be up to this evening to deprive Mr. Rice of a victory.

The game today, which by the way is the re-play of the Kappa-Calvary game that was called on account of darkness last Friday with the score standing at three-all, should attract one of the best crowds of the season for something's going to happen. Just about everything has happened in the two Kappa games so far except good baseball and they may even turn around and do some of that today, and if they do you can count the Kappas in the series for at least a couple more days and Calvary out for at least 12 months.

Weak Defense

This fraternity team which waded through Commercial league opposition as though it wasn't even there, has had the benefit of the best pitching in the series so far and it's only their own weak infield play that is preventing them from coming awfully close to copping off the city championship. It's our own little opinion that either the "Kaps" are going to settle down and play some decent baseball against Calvary or they are going to blow higher than ever before. Of course there's the ever-present possibility that Mr. Rice may get tired of pitching his head off and get it knocked off by the Calvary clouters.

We don't see much possibility of the latter however for Calvary was anything but familiar with his offerings last Friday when men got on bases. They could get them on but that's about all.

Hitting 182

Not being satisfied with playing putrid ball in the field the Kappas are hitting at the terrific rate of 182 as a team, having collected ten hits out of 55 times at bat and Johnny Rife has smashed out four of these, Bill Woods, George Hinklin, Roy Rice, Marion Hinklin and Herrod Geissler all have their first hit to get in the series while Gene Geissler has one bingle, a home run, Roscoe Rank has a double and Pete Haflich has three singles to his credit.

Calvary on the other hand has been hitting hard but not when hits mean runs. Flash Baldauf is topping all the series hitters with five hits and a walk in seven trips to the plate while all told the No. 1 league champions have pounded out 19 hits in 61 trials. These include two home runs, two triples, and two doubles and still they can't win a game. That kind of hitting can't fail to win ball games very long and something's bound to happen soon. It may be today but nobody seems very willing to bet anything on it.

The starting lineups are expected to be the same for the replay as were in effect at the first game between these two teams.

WELTERS CONTINUE TRAINING FOR SCRAP

Freeman Given Good Chance To Lift Crown from Jack Thompson.

By International News Service

CLEVELAND, Sept. 2—Young Jack Thompson, champion, and Tommy Freeman, challenger, who will put on the gloves here Friday night in a battle for the world's welterweight title, today planned to continue their training.

The two fighters worked out in a local gym yesterday. Thompson appeared to be in fine trim to defend his title. Some boxing experts predicted, however, that if the champion keeps up his strenuous training program he will be overtrained for the bout.

Freeman is a pound and a half over the title weight, but it was believed he will have no difficulty in trimming off the extra weight in the five days remaining before his set-to with Thompson. The challenger's program today is six rounds of sparring.

Wood Is Champ Despite Costly Plans of Foes

By The Associated Press

DETROIT, Sept. 2—Gar Wood, the silver haired pilot, is speedboat champion of the world for at least another year.

His Miss Americas defeated the best the British had to offer in the Harmsworth trophy race and in the second and final heat yesterday two of them—Miss America IX, driven by Wood and Miss America VIII, driven by his brother George—bettered the record for a 30-mile heat.

The Miss America IX averaged 77.390 miles an hour yesterday, compared with the former record of 75.287 made by Gar Wood in the Miss America VIII last year. The eighth averaged 77.233 yesterday and turned in the fastest lap at 79.185.

Miss Marion Barbara Carstairs must return to England without the trophy although she has spent about $500,000 in efforts to acquire it. This was her third attempt to lift the trophy held by Wood since he won it at the Isle of Wight in 1920. Miss Carstairs has the distinction of being the first challenger ever to finish a heat in a Harmsworth race against Wood's hydroplanes.

CHICAGO CUBS GIVEN DOUBLE DEFEAT AS CARDS CAPTURE TWO

Gabby Street's Boys Have Eyes on Pennant as They Lick Bucs.

By International News Service

NEW YORK, Sept. 2—Those St. Louis Cardinals are the spice of life. With everyone about ready to throw a grand canyon yawning at the humpty dumpties of the Cubs, Giants and Robins, the Red Birds spanked the Pirates twice, 11 to 6 and 5 to 1 and moved into third place in the national merry-go-round today. They seem to have made up their minds to go somewhere without any detours and if Chicago, New York and Brooklyn continue to insist on taking all the side-trips, St. Louis has a fine chance to get home first, providing the gasoline holds out.

The Reds plugged away ideas of the Cubs about settling the thing here and now by snatching a twin bill, 5 to 0 and 2 to 1. Hack Wilson got a bad bounce on Sukeforth's hit to center in the ninth and it went for a triple, scoring two men and winning the ball game. Red Lucas was as mysterious as a drugstore sandwich and gave only three hits in the opener.

Carl Hubbell lowered away the Phils easily 8 to 4 but Philly's big sticks got to the Giant pitchers and copped the afterpiece 4 to 3.

The volatile Robins did another Chameleon act and slipped into fourth position after splitting a doubleheader with the Braves. Wally Berger's homer cinched the opener for Boston, 5 to 3, and Hollis Thurston was just good enough to wrap up the finale, 4 to 2.

Even Break

Some 70,000 fans saw Babe Ruth make three hits with his injured back strapped tighter than a fiddle's strings but the best the Yanks could do was drop the starter 3 to 2 to the Athletics and take the second 2 to 0 when Charlie Ruffing did a swell piece of pitching, allowing the A's only two bingles. Grove's fanning of Ruth clinched the "A" win.

Crowder held the Ruddy Sox to seven hits and salted it for the Senators, 2 to 1. Lloyd Brown, relief hurler, homering to capture the evening skirmish, 6 to 3.

Whitehill's pitching humbled the Alabasters of Chicago 4 to 2, while Alexander's hitting made it a full day for Detroit, the Tigers tucking it away, 6 to 5.

Heavy hitting by Porter was a big factor in the Indians double defeat of the Brownies, 13 to 8 and 9 to 6.

Billy Arnold Clinches 1930 Auto Speed Title

ALTOONA, Pa., Sept. 2—Billy Arnold, young Chicago race driver, today was assured of winning the 1930 automobile speed title, having annexed the Labor day classic here. He drove a Miller-Hartz special, defeating a noteworthy field.

Arnold's victory climaxed his win at the Memorial day races at Indianapolis. The race, although scheduled for 200 miles, was ended abruptly on the ninety-third lap when a heavy downpour of rain flooded the track, making driving extremely dangerous.

CONNIE MACK FACES FAMILIAR PROBLEM WITH ALL-STAR NINE

BY DAVIS J. WALSH
I. N. S. Sports Writer

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 2—There seems to be something about a winner that enrages this town out of all reason and, on the other hand, it apparently can learn to love a loser in a very big way.

Anyhow, one story here today is that the Philadelphia Athletics, champions of the world, are experiencing something of the same situation that confronted them back in 1914 when everybody stayed away from the ball park very resolutely. Another is that the Phillies, having won 43 out of 130 games for a natty .331, are disposed to go along with Mr. Burt Shotton, under whose auspices this most dubious of records has been sponsored. Ordinarily, one might look for Mr. Shotton to hit the asphalt on the first bounce, particularly in view of the fact that many deemed him to have started the season with a potential first division club.

In this connection, it might also be mentioned that he is laboring in the interests of W. F. Baker, who like Sam Breadon never waits until he sees the whites of their eyes before firing. He has been known to fire without seeing anything except the standing of the clubs.

So his tolerance in the case of Mr. Shotton would be surprising, if it wasn't for the fact that everything about Mr. Shotton is surprising. He is one of the most successful failures known to baseball

I talked to Shotton himself this morning and he seemed to have every confidence that he would be allowed to go on trying to build up the Phillies next year, which is something like trying to make a vest out of an armhole. The club has two of the hitting leaders of the league in Klein and O'Doul, two good infielders in Whitney and Thevenow and the unfortunate reputation of being a good ball club that cannot win. What it happens to be is a very poor ball club that gives an impression to which it isn't at all entitled.

It hits away over .300 as a club but does most of its hitting after the ball game is lost beyond recall. It has no pitchers. Two of its infielders are playing on the dime that Mr. Baker gave them as a token of his esteem. The outfield, if not defensively impossible, is at least highly improbable. The club, in spite of its punch, is so slow that it hits into more double plays than any other in the major leagues

Still at It

However, whatever it is, the club is Mr. Shotton's own and, as such, it is something to be moderately proud of. They gave him nothing to manage three years ago. He has been managing it with intelligence, if not success, ever since He has made a lot of trades and

MARKET QUIET AFTER HOLIDAY

Few Changes in Prices of Stocks; Amusement Issues Rise.

By International News Service

NEW YORK, Sept. 2—Reopening of the stock market after the holiday recess reflected little or no changes in general conditions, at least in their effect upon stock prices. The amusement stocks, under the lead of Fox and Warner, forged ahead to the best price levels on the move and a few of the industrials and specialties staged an occasional "demonstration." This was the whole story of a market from which better things had been expected as soon as the holiday let down had passed.

Financial and business conditions were unchanged. Money was plentiful at two per cent, with the usual competition in the outside market. Investment buying of railroad and industrial dividend stocks was sufficient to absorb the small volume of offerings coming on the market, and the professionals were not inclined to "sell 'em short," even with the short interest largely eliminated as it was last week.

Warner Brothers reached 32 for the first time since its recent decline to 24 and Fox crossed 51 on its long-term recovery from 16½. Loews, Radio Keith, Paramount and Columbia graphophone were in good demant.

Montgomery Ward and Sears Roebuck, at the head of the mercantile stocks, rose two and 3½ points respectively, in a fairly active market. An effort to attract a following to the motor stocks was not very successful, though General Motors sold about a point higher and Briggs manufacturing passed through in fairly large blocks.

HOPKINS CHANGES PLEA TO CHARGE

Court Binds Man to Grand Jury; Bond Set at $1,000 Today.

After changing a former plea to guilty, John Hopkins of Green Camp today is being held to the grand jury under $1,000 bond on a charge of breaking and entering a storehouse. He changed a former not guilty plea when he appeared before Judge William R. Martin in municipal court this morning.

Hopkins, arrested last week with a brother, Willard, and his mother, Mrs. Martha Hopkins, was charged with breaking into the Norris Carey granary near Green Camp, from which 60 bushels of wheat were taken. The brother is now serving a sentence in Mansfield on a similar charge in connection with the theft.

The mother recently pleaded guilty to a charge of abandoning six minor children.

Today in Marion Market

Groceries, Produce, Meats, Grain, Livestock

Marion produce prices underwent little if any change over the holiday season. Prices quoted Friday and Saturday continued to rule markets today.

The local fruit supply was augmented today by the arrival of Concord grapes, a variety grown in Marion county, at five cents a pound.

Despite early predictions that the peach crop this year will justify canning of peaches, indications were today that the few bushels to reach Marion markets for canning purposes will command prices too high for ready sale. It is expected that grocers will not lay in a large stock of peaches in bushel lots.

WHEAT PRICES HIT NEW LOW

Weakness of Liverpool Quotations Drives Grain Prices Down.

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, Sept. 2—Weakness in Liverpool wheat quotations drove prices of wheat future deliveries to new low marks for the season in Chicago early today. Selling started with a rush, but support was lacking and the market dropped more than a cent a bushel. Corn was higher at the start because of bullish corn crop reports expected from private crop authorities and the September delivery at one time hit one dollar a bushel. Opening ¾@1⅜ lower, wheat sagged still more. Corn started unchanged, climbed a little more, and then weakened because of selling pressure in wheat.

Corn prices advanced to nearly the best figures of the day after the expected private crop reports were published, but selling pressure soon drove quotations down until they were slightly under Friday's close. The one report which was expected to show a huge 1930 corn crop loss because drouth and heat, forecasted a yield of 1,918,000,000 bushels. The average of several such forecasts showed an expected yield of 1,948,000,000 bushels. This compares to the August forecast by the same authorities of 2,469,000,000 bushels and the government official figures of 2,212,000,000 bushels.

Wheat was weaker because of lower Liverpool quotations and easiness at Winnipeg. There were some liquidating sales of the September delivery, with spread transactions between Chicago and Winnipeg reported under way.

CONNIE MACK FACES FAMILIAR PROBLEM

Crowds in Philly Flock To See Lowly Men of Shotton.

none of them have been bad. This is the first of two things he has made on behalf of his owner, the other being money. Whatever else they are, the Phillies at least are an interesting outfit.

They are so interesting, in fact, that they had more paid attendance than the world's champion Athletics during recent home stands of the two local clubs. The champions, it appears, are being taken pretty much for granted here, just as the last winning club Connie Mack had back in 1914 was ignored because it won too much. On that occasion, Mr. Mack had to sell his stars to get even. I don't say the same condition exists today but, according to the local version, if the owners are staying awake at night it isn't to glont over the box office figures.

RETIRED VETERAN TO AID OFFICERS

F. O. Tuttle Offers Assistance in Obtaining Compensation for U. S. Soldiers.

In the interests of partially disabled army officers who may not be receiving the compensation to which they are entitled or may not be retired as present laws allow, F. O. Tuttle Jr. of 146 Carhart street, a retired disabled officer of the World war, announced today that he would aid any such officers in obtaining compensation.

Tuttle, who was recently discharged from a government hospital, stated that a number of officers who are now working on a pension should be retired under the present regulations. Others, he said are retired but are not receiving the compensation to which they are entitled.

Army officers, Tuttle states, are required to be partailly disabled in order to entitle them to retirement on a pension amounting to 75 per cent of their base pay.

No charge is to be made for any aid given an officer, according to Tuttle. The only interest he has in the obtaining of such pensions, he says, is to gain for those officers who remain in the service because they are unaware of the existing regulations, the pensions and retirement to which they are entitled by law.

WARNING!
...When You Buy a Tire
Look at the Full Name on the "Sidewall!"

Not long ago, a big tire maker conceived the idea of building and selling "second-line" tires to the public.

He felt "something just had to be done" to stem the growing popularity of Riversides, a "FIRST-LINE" Tire... priced about 27% under his own first line tire!

Other big tire manufacturers followed suit!

Quality was not so important... it was more a matter of meeting price!

Frankly, we are not concerned with the subsequent success or failure of their plan. We only know that "FIRST-QUALITY" Riversides are almost daily achieving new high sales successes throughout America ... at the same time saving Riverside users about 27% of their tire money ... or yielding a few thousand extra miles in every tire.

We do believe the public is entitled to the TRUTH ... that RIVERSIDES are "FIRST-LINE" Tires, backed by our Unlimited Guarantee ... that they are ONLY to be compared to other "first-line" tires ... and that any other comparison is for the sake of making a favorable price impression on some hapless tire purchaser.

So, refer to the tables printed below... and in buying your tires, learn to look at the FULL NAME on the "sidewall!" Then you'll learn to save a lot of after-grief—and about 27% of your good money!

Best Known "First-Line" Tires	Best Known "Second-Line" Tires
Goodyear—All Weather	Goodyear—Pathfinder
Goodrich—Silvertown	Goodrich—Cavalier
Firestone—Gum Dipped	Firestone—Oldfield and Anchor
U. S. Royal	U. S. Rubber Co.'s Peerless
Ward's—RIVERSIDE	Ward's—TRAILBLAZER

This is a Partial List ... there are a number of other makers who produce two or more grades of Tires.

Come in ... let us show you the difference ... and in your visit to our stores you will not be urged to buy.

NOTE: If you want a "second-line" tire ... buy Trailblazers ... sold only by Montgomery Ward & Co., also sold at very much less than other "second-line" tires. They're as good as, or better than other "second-line" tires ... full of honest service.

P. S. You may buy Riversides ... or Trailblazers ... on Easy Payments ... in all sizes. We invite you to come in ... and talk over with us your needs. Don't forget ... FREE MOUNTING SERVICE on all Ward Tires!
